Duse the Supreme.

Montrose J. Moses, in The North American Review: Eleonora Duse stood on the stage of one of our largest New York theaters—a fragile, exquisite exemplification of acting at its highest. A multitude packed the house from pit to dome, held in the magic of her matchless hands. The play was Ibsen's Ghosts and around it the sensitive network of inevitable reactions was spun. The cavernous house of silence held the trembling intonations of her voice, the vast spaces of distance from the farthest spectator to the footlights could not dim the restless sweep of her walk, the revealing reality of her gesture. The bare shell of this wonderful artist, past sixty, did not matter, tho the rhythm of her was still supreme Her eyes, deep sunk with the tragedy of time, glowed with that inner life of spirit which showed how she grasps her art to the uttermost depths, and gives it forth, not according to the formula of the regular theater, but according to the intense life of the play. Everywhere in the vast house, this sense of Duse was carried. She moved against a very oldfashioned background, bad enough to set the teeth of the new scenery artists on edge. The rocky banks of fiords waved in the breeze behind the stage. Nothing matered but Duse. One felt the full force of the power of the theater.

GERMAN MONEY TO ARTISTS

Rich Attend Concerts in Berlin at $2 a Seat While Poor People Are Starving.

BERLIN, Dec. 31.—Fritz Kreisler, famous violinist, this year played to standing room only at a benefit concert in Berlin—undesirable seats on the platform costing $2, with others in accordance.

Last year Kriesler played a similar benefit with the best box seats costing the equivalent of 7 cents. This tells in a word the difference between the Berlin of 1922 and the Berlin of 1923.

Battistini, Caruso's old rival for favor in Berlin, recently played to a crowded house at the state opera on Under Den Linden for prices which averaged about $1 higher than Caruso ever received here Yet the public fills the opera when old Battistini appears—no matter what the price may be.

And across the Spree, behind the museum which was once the castle of Wilhelm II., hundreds of unemployed are at the point of starvation It is one of the paradoxes of German life which, as one observer put it, makes everything one says about Germany true.

PADDLING IS RESUMED

Ohio Girls' Industrial School to See Restoration of Old-Fashioned Remedy.

COLUMBUS, O. Dec 31—Paddling was re established today at the girl's industrial school near Delaware.

The state welfare department's order against corporal punishment was revoked by Governor Donahey

Margaret Elton, matron of the school, said the whack of the paddle will balk further attempts by inmates to oragnize an uprising like that which threw the institution into an uproar last week.

The industrial school riot Friday night and Saturday in which more than 100 young girls took part was believed attributable to the welfare department's ban on corporal punishment.

Twenty-one leaders in the rioting were moved to the Marysville reformatory Others were returned to their cottages on the school grounds and locked in Two inmates who escaped in the disturbance are still missing.

NEBRASKA CATTLE GO ON WILD JAGS

Dodge County Farmers Worried Over Cows Dying of Intoxication, Caused Probably by Immature Corn.

FREMONT, Neb., Dec. 31.—Intoxication among cows and steers browsing in Dodge county fields is worrying several farmers who have experienced trouble with their herds thru as high as seven of these animals becoming in a dazed condition as the result of eating stalks of corn in the fields Some report that cows have died from the intoxication. According to a farmer who visited Chief of Police Nagel yesterday, he placed his herd on the lowlands to feed on corn. Within a short time the hindquarters became weak and several of the animals were found in a squatting posture.

Believing that the corn was unhealthful for them they were moved to the tops of the rolling knolls and placed in the cornfields to eat the corn in the shocks.

A short time later when the farmer looked over his herd he found several animals staggering, while others seemed dazed and stared at him from glassy eyes. He found that, to give one a faint shove, would cause it to fall over on its side.

One reason given in explanation of the strange antics among the cattle is that the corn did not fully mature and harden. The sap in the stalks was not dried and remained after the corn was cut, possibly fomenting

MR. KNUDSON OPTIMISTIC

Banking Department Head Believes Unfair Earnings Distribution Will Be Corrected.

Deputy Secretary K. C. Knudson ofthe state department of trade and commerce, sends the following new year's greetings to Nebraska bankers:

"Some 300 years ago our Pilgrim fathers landed in the undisputed home of wild beasts and wilder men. They were shut off by a ten weeks travel from the nearest shore of civilization. They lived in the little suts upon the simplest of diet and subjected to all of the rigid hardships that ever were known to mankind. In spite of all this they set aside a day of appreciation for their blessings received and forgot their many misfortunes.

These pilgrim fathers of ours started a nation which has developed, gone forward, and prospered without parallel in history; a country which has ever stood for the right and whose flag has never known defeat; a people to whom hardships have been but stepping stones to better things.

"In these days at the close of 1923 when we are asking more of return and less effort for that return, it may well be questioned if the order of our ancestry has not been reversed, so that we now forget our blessings, which are many and remembered only our misfortunes, which are few.

"Beyond doubt the agricultural sections within our country as well as other sections have witnessed some very unfair distributions of earnings as related to investment and effort. The case has been heard before the bar of public opinion and the citizens of Nebraska with their ballot this coming year will no doubt add such strength that this public sentiment will be enforced by our national government. A little more appreciation of blessings—a little more disregard of misfortune—a little more optimistic about the future and a continuation of good citizenship will make 1924 a prosperous year.

"I believe my success is due to the fact that I have worked hard and kept my head down to my work

Miss Davis plans to make a large organization out of her enterprise

CHURCH FORCES MAY FUSE

Modernist - Fundamentalist Strife May Force Division Into Two Great Groups.

NEW YORK, Dec 31—Nineteen twenty four may go down in history as the year of the great alignment in the church forces of the United States, it was indicated here today.

Spurred by the war between fundamentalists and modernists in the protestant Episcopal church, thoughtful observers of religious affairs saw hte possibility of a definite division of religious forces into two great groups—liberals and conservatives.

Sermons delivered by leading divines here yesterday strengthened this opinion.

"Fundamentalists test their religion by dogma," said Rev. Luke White, in his sermon in St Bartholomew's.

"If you apply the precepts of Jesus literally you will make nonsense of the bible," Dr. Karl Reiland asserted in St. George's.

"Flapperism is the reaction of insulted intelligence of youth against the miserable hypocrisy of parents," Rev. Charles Francis Potter told his congregation in the West Side Unitarian church.

MUST FIND WAY TO UTILIZE SUN

CINCINNATI, O, Dec. 31—Science must find a way to utilize the heat of the sun or within the next 100 years civilization will collapse for want of fuel, Dr. D. T. MacDougal declared today.

Dr. MacDougal is chairman of the photo synthesis committee of the American association for the advancement of science, in session here.

The world's supply of forests, coal and oil—sources of all power—rapidly is being exhausted, he said.

"These supplies certainly will give out within 100 years. Personally I believe they will give out even sooner.

"A new power supply must be found within that time or civilization cannot continue at its present normal cost.

Setting out new forests would not help matters much, Dr MacDougal said, because the world is using up forests faster than trees can be grown to replace them

"Our dream is to find out exactly how plants utilize sunlight in the process of absorbing carbon dioxide and turning it into sugars,' said Dr. MacDougall.

Dr. Berthelot of France, and Dr. Baly of England, are two of the men at work on this subject

"It is to be discussed again next August when the British Association for the Advancement of Science meets in Toronto."

Dr. MacDougall is director of the desert laboratory at Tuscon, Ariz., where a study of photo synthesis is being made under the direction of Dr Spoehr.

"We feel definite progress in the understanding of the process is being made," Dr. MacDougall said.

STORM COVERS MUCH TERRITORY

NEW ENVOY FOR AMERICA

Sir Esme Howard to Be English Ambassador.

NOW STATIONED AT MADRID

Geddes Retiring Because of Defective Eyesight.

Labor Press in London Wrought Up Over Change in Minister to Washington — Kellogg Arrives in London.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—Official announcement of the appointment of Sir Esme Howard to succeed Sir Eric Geddes as British ambassador to Washington was made here simultaneously with the arrival of American Ambassador Kellogg, who took up his official duties at the embassy today as successor to George Harvey.

Sir Esme Howard, P. C., K. C. B., K. C. M. G., is at present British ambassador at Madrid. Sir Eric Geddes is retiring because of defective eyesight. He is returning to Washington first to arrange affairs before resigning his post.

The labor press is incensed by the change of British ambassadors and even the Daily News, while not objecting to Sir Esme Howard personally, asks "why the indecent hurry?" and wants to know if the conservatives are afraid that a labor government would appoint some communist like the noisy Newbold.

Ambassador Kellogg arrived in the thickest and moistest of London fogs and went with Mrs. Kellogg to Claridges, where he will live temporarily. He announced he would be available to visitors immediately and that he would be at his work this morning.

KLAN PLANS CONVENTION

February Meeting to Determine Whether Organization Shall Be Changed or Killed.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 31.—A convention of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan to make the organization what it should be or to kill it will be held February 15-20, E. Y. Clarke, former imperial wizard, announced today.

Clarke in an open letter last week asking President Coolidge to intervene in the factional strife in the hooded order declared the klan was not following its original purposes, and should either be cleaned up or killed.

"I will issue the call for the klonvocation next Thursday night. It will be sent to all klans of the nation," Clarke said.

Clarke said the convention would be to consider ponits laid down in his letter to President Coolidge

"An international language," he said, will simplify business transactions and make for a better understanding between nations

DAYTON RIMS A COLLEAGUE

CRITICIZES COWGILL FOR NOT CLEARING AWAY SNOW.

Declares Refusal to Care for City Hall Steps Childish Whim Aimed at Finance Head Personally.

A few short days ago Commissioners Dayton and Cowgill wished each other a merry Christmas. They are not to repeat the stage stunt for New Years. The finance head on Monday delivered a scorching rebuke against his colleague for failure to clear the snow from the city hall steps and from the walks which skirt the hall. In the old saloon days, it was quite the thing for drunks to sober up a bit by pushing snow from about the city hall. Since prohibition was introduced, the street department has seen to the clearing of the snow.

When Mr. Dayton discovered what appeared to be most of the snow in the world on the city hall steps, he called Road Boss Overton on the phone. "What's the matter Bill?" asked the custodian of city property which includes the city hall, "Have you forgotten our time honored custom?"

"Nothing doing, Mr. Dayton," said Overton, "Have orders from Major Cowgill not to send any one over."

"He is not spiting me," said the finance head. "He has the childish idea that he is. His lack of courtesy is an added cost to the taxpayer. His attitude has indicated an apparent desire to make things as expensive and difficult for the taxpayer as possible. We have never expected the street department to do something for nothing. The city property fund has stood the cost of snow clearance."

Mr. Dayton said that he was required to go into the street and pick up ment to do the work Monday. Commissioner Cowgill disputes this statement. He said that he sent a man over.

"He hires his janitors so why not his step cleaners?" asked the street department head. "I am under no obligations to take men from other work and send them over to him. My men were busy. There's nothing unusual, personal or political in the matter."

The street department head stated that lack of proper housing facilities for his motor apparatus caused him no end of trouble Monday. Stored in a cold barn, his five trucks refused to function and he experienced a touch time of it. He endeavored to put these trucks in the muny coal service, he said, to rush coal to people who actually suffered from cold. He had discovered a warm place for two big tractors in contemplation of snow scraping in the streets He discovered, however, that little snow was in the street. He expected to touch up some street spaces with one of them during the afternoon and also to introduce his motorized sidewalk broom

Mr Dayton called Road Boss Overton a second time to ask where to put the snow from the city hall walk. He was asked to leave it at the edge of the walk which he did

HE DID NOT BOOST GAS

GOVERNOR SATISFIED WITH PRICE AT 16 1-4 CENTS.

If It Goes Higher He Will Sell Gasoline—Attorney General Is Working While Others Talk.

Why did Governor Bryan raise the price of gasoline two cents? This question was uppermost at the capitol Monday morning where it has been proclaimed from time to time that he reduced the price all over sixteen states and the Pacific coast. Governor Bryan gracefully met the situation. In an interview he modestly takes all the credit for a reduction but disclaims blame for the increase. This he lays upon a combination of independents and the Standard Oil. He is not disturbed by the increase to 16 1-4 cents a gallon as he says that is the price he originally reduced it to, but if the combination goes higher than that he will carry out his previous threat to sell gasoline at cut rates and thus buck the combination.

He takes the position, however, that the independents and Standard Oil company have shown by their agreement to increase the price that they have quit competition and that the situation constitutes a cause of action by attorneys general of states and federal officers under the Nebraska Junkin act and federal laws to prevent unlawful combinations.

"And I propose to see that the state law functions as long as I am governor," he announced.

"The attorneys general have been working instead of talking," said Attorney General Spillman. "They organized to gather evidence. They are doing that and if any one has any evidence they will be glad to get it. We are still working and we are hoping for some relief from congress. Some speak of the Junkin act who never read it and who don't know what it provides. The fact that two or more companies charge the same for a commodity is not sufficient evidence upon which to base a prosecution. Under the Nebraska laws it will be easier to convict companies of

COSGRAVE TO BE IN FIELD

FILES MONDAY AS A CANDIDATE FOR DISTRICT JUDGE.

Resigned Post When Wire From War Department Reached Him —Received Ranking of Lieutenant Colonel.

P. James Cosgrave early Monday afternoon paid his filing fee with the county treasurer and presented petition and affidavit to the secretary of state as preliminary steps to having his name placed on the non-partisan ballot as a candidate for district judge.

Forty years a resident of Lincoln, seventeen years a judge, a lieutenant during the war and a practicing attorney since. This is the record in brief. There are, however, a number of high spots. He served as police judge for six years and as county judge for four years. He was then elected district judge when along about the end of his seventh year in office, he received a wire from the war department.

Judge Cosgrave resigned on the spot. He went to France as fast as he could get there and soon after he had set foot on French soil his rank of major was raised to that of lieutenant-colonel.

For many weeks his friends have urged him to be a candidate for the office which he dropped to go to war.

WATER PLANT TAKING JUMP

LARGEST SINGLE PUMPING UNIT WILL BE ADDED.

Connected Centrifugal Pumps Having Eight Million Capacity to Be Installed at New A Street Station.

Commissioner Schroeder will ask for bids to be submitted January 23 on two connected centifugal pumps of 8,000,000 capacity to be installed in the new A street station. City Engineer Erickson estimates the cost at $13,000. Foundations, piping and all probably will run the bill up close to the $18,000 mark. When the station was built, provision was made for installation of this machinery which will constitute the largest single pumping unit in the plant service.

One of the pumps will be reserved for use in time of fire. The domestic pressure pump will maintain a sixty pound pressure. The booster pump, in time of fire, will increase this pressure to 90 pounds. Addition of the new pumping unit will give the A street station an emergency pumpage capacity of 18,500,000 gallons per day and the plant proper a capacity of 24,500,000 gallons, including the 6,000,000 at the Van Dorn station. To date the drain on the plant in the heat of summer has never at one time exceeded a rate of 14,000,000 gallons per day. It is necessary, however, to have reserve equipment.

The 6,000,000 gallon Snow horizontal pump, however, has given little regard for the need of rest. It has operated continuously and without mishap for twelve years. Even the 27 year-old Fairbanks pump with a capacity of 1,500,000 gallons per day stands ready for service when it is required.

Mr. Schroeder also was prepared Monday to award a contract for $1,800 to Charlie Johnson for moving three boilers from the old part of the plant to the new. After two new boilers were erected in the new plant, foundations for four old ones were built at a cost of $10,762. Two will be put in place now. It will require approximately four carloads of brick to wall them in. This item will run between $5,000 and $6,000 The third boiler will be moved later and at some time in the near future a companion boiler will be erected thus providing a string of six of three sets of two each in the new plant. All new boilers are of 500

The weather bureau reported warmer weather in sight for Tuesday.

Billings, the end of the Burlington's northwest lines, reported 20 degrees below on Sunday and 36 degrees below on Monday morning.

Northwest of Lincoln intensely cold weather with a stiff breeze and no snow falling was reported west of Whitman. East of that place low temperatures, a stiff wind and snow falling in drifts was reported.

The Burlington reported that it was starting no branch line trains in the early morning, waiting for reports as to the depth of the drifts. Later most of these trains were moved. Considerable snow fell during the night over eastern Nebraska with a strong wind that whipped it into drifts. Reports showed from 3 to 6 inches over the state.

The Burlington reported in the afternoon that trains had run over all branch lines excepting those north of Aurora, and that conditions there were improving, indicating that service could be begun there soon.

The low temperature at Lincoln was 1 below.

The McCook division of the Burlington, extending from Hastings and Red Cloud west to Denver, reported snow falling over the entire division with low temperatures and brisk winds.

Snow, driven before a gale that approached the proportions of a real blizzard in many sections, was reported from Chadron, Alliance, Norfolk, Grand Island, North Platte, Sunday night.

Fifteen toll lines and fifteen farm lines are reported out of commission by Lincoln Telephone company officials in the Lincoln district early Monday morning. The nature of the damage consists in broken wires due to the cold weather. One toll line each to Hastings, Fremont, Wahoo, Nebraska City, Tecumseh, Cortland and Wilbur are some of the lines are out of commission in the Lincoln district.

In the Hastings district ten toll lines are reported down with ten lines down in the York district, fifteen in the Beatrice district and eight at Nebraska City. No poles are

THOMPSON IS HELD TO DISTRICT COURT

Bound Over Monday Forenoon on Charge of Obtaining Money From Allen McLean by Misrepresentation.

After a preliminary hearing Frank Thompson, who was brought from Los Angeles to face a charge here of obtaining money under false pretenses, was bound over to the present term of district court Monday forenoon by Acting Justice of Peace E G Margi in Justice Stevens' court Mr Thompson's bond was reset at $5,000 but he had made no arrangement to furnish the bail by early Monday afternoon

Mr Thompson is charged with representing to Allen McLean of University Place, that he owned 60,000 shares of stock in the Mid Continent Consolidated Oil Gas, and Refining company of the par value of $1 a share and which was of the value of one hundred cents on the dollar. McLean testified that he paid Thompson $750 on the strength of the alleged misrepresentation Earl McLean son of the complainant testified. The defense attempted to show that Mr McLean knew that the stock was not worth one hundred cents on the dollar when he purchased it. He said that he was made a director of the company and held the office for two days

It is alleged that Thompson jumped $2,000 bond in Chicago last September. He was arrested in Los Angeles and returned on a charge, according to officers before being brought to Lincoln

PART RELIEF FROM STORM

TWO BELOW AT OMAHA AT 6 A. M. MONDAY.

Trains Delayed and Wire Communication Demoralized in Nebraska, Wyoming, Dakotas, Kansas and Southwest.

OMAHA, Dec. 31.—Partial relief from the blizzard which has raged in Nebraska, Wyoming and the Dakotas since Saturday night was promised by the weather bureau here today.

Colder weather will come tonight, but the wind and snow will cease, Forecaster Robins said this morning.

Temperature at Omaha reached 2 below at 6 a. m., but the bulb was slowly rising at 7, and the bureau predicted that it would not go below that point. The storm was accompanied by considerable snow and a wind which ranged from twenty-five to forty miles an hour.

Temperatures thruout the state ranged from zero to 15 below. Hastings this morning reported 8 below. It was 10 below at Valentine, Neb., at 7 p. m. last night with the mercury falling. Cheyenne, Wyo., reported 16 below at 7 p. m.

Railroad and wire traffic was considerably hampered by the storm. Street car service and taxicab service in Omaha was badly hampered.

Snow may continue to fall thruout the day, Forecaster Robins said

The wind velocity average for the past 24 hours was 24 miles an hour.

There was a possibility that the sun will take command of the situation along about 3 p. m., Robins said, but he added quickly: "That's a possibility, not an official forecast."

Mrs. A. M. Pinto was bodly burned and shocked when the wind blew down a trolley wire at Twenty-fourth and Cumming streets last

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 31.—An old-time blizzard swept across Kansas plains and other sections of the southwest today, delaying trains and demoralizing wire communication.

Snow fell during the night, swept by a gale which reached fifty miles an hour. Mercury dropped close to zero.

Stock-raisers were forced to find shelter for their animals and feed was in demand. Farmers were well prepared, however, as the season until the present storm has been mild and they were able to conserve feed.

Snow which fell early in the evening afforded some shelter for the wheat from freezing temperatures. However, as the snow drifted considerably, many fields were swept bare

DEMANDS INQUIRY INTO SELLING ARMS

Representative Nelson Questions Compact Between U. S. and Mexico.

ANNOUNCEMENT PREMATURE?

Developments Indicate Such an Assumption.

PROGRESSIVE FIRE IS STARTED

Agreement of America to Dispose of Ammunition to Obregon Government Discussed by Hughes and Weeks.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Demand for congressional investigation of the agreement of the United States government to sell arms and ammunition to the Obregon government of Mexico was made today by Representative Nelson, Wisconsin, leader of the progressive bloc.

At the same time developments indicated that the state department announcement Saturday night that the arms were sold might have been premature.

Secretary of War Weeks indicated this afternoon after a long conference with Secretary Hughes. Weeks is opposed to selling the war material to Obregon and told Hughes so.

"I do not approve of the United States furnishing arms to either side in Mexico," Nelson said. "It is curious that the state department is now rushing to the aid of a government which it so long refused to recognize. Perhaps it would be well for congress to look into this phase of dollar diplomacy."

Weeks' conference with Hughes lasted more than half an hour. At the end of it neither would disclose what was said, but Weeks said that "premature announcements" might prove embarrassing to this government.

Shortly after the conference Hughes went to the white house for a conference with President Coolidge.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 31.—Enthusiasm in government circles knew no bounds today when word spread that the United States had agreed to sell arms to President Obregon.

The announcement came as a surprise and it is generally held that the action of the Washington government means a speedy crushing of the rebels.

Several former service men of the A. E. F. are reported to have volunteered their services, following the intimation.

Government at Washington looked with favor upon Obregon's cause. One American aviator is reported to have offered to furnish a plane.

President Obregon refused all such offers because he desires to inculcate a "hands off" policy for foreigners; also, he believes his present army sufficient to cope with the situation.

DEATH CALLS AN AGED BUSINESS MAN

Frederick A. Korsmeyer Had Been an Active Figure in Lincoln Business Affairs for Nearly Forty Years.

Frederick A. Korsmeyer, who passed away Sunday morning at his home, 1950 C street, at the age of eighty-two, was one of the pioneer business men of Lincoln. He came to the city in 1884 from Decatur, Ill., to open up a plumbing and heating house, which was one of the first of the kind in the city. Mr. Korsmeyer had been engaged in a similar business in Illinois. After fifteen or twenty years the introduction of electricity into general use, caused a gradual change in the business into electrical supplies No change was made, however, in the personnel of the firm Mr Korsmeyer continued as president of the company until the time of his death and up to his final illness was seen for a part at least of each day at his place of business.

The rugged honesty of Mr Korsmeyer won for him the sincerest respect of his associates thruout his long business career. He was a man of quiet demeanor, but of decided convictions, and when once his mind had been made up, he was undevia'

SIMMONS FOR CONGRESS

Reresentative From the Big Sixth District Files for Renomination —Mr. Osborne May Run.

Congressman Robert G. Simmons of Scottsbluff filed his personal nomination Monday as a republican candidate for renomination in the Sixth congressional district. P. C. Osborne of Bayard, a Presbyterian preacher who was a member of the recent constitutional convention and of the last senate, is being groomed as a democratic possibilty. As evidence of Mr. Osborne's fitness for a place in congress it is alleged Congressman Simmons obtained much of his religious training in a church where he was pastor

P. W. Scott, an attorney of McCook, has filed as a republican candidate for senator in the Twenty-ninth district.

HE URGED TO BE SPECIFIC

EAST LINCOLN LEAGUERS BACK WITH MORE GOODS.

Mayor Zehrung Advised Them to Do Something Definite in Regard to Governmental Plan and Members Do Not.

A communication from the East Lincoln civic league, found its way to the council table Monday. It was an essay on how to conduct the light department along lines of more light, less fixed charge and possibly no competition eventually

Mayor Zehrung had urged that leaguers be more specific in their governmental arrangement. To date, however, the thing more specific has not arrived. The communication on how to operate the light department is signed by W. E. Field, president of the organization, and Joe Burns. These men, taking their data from a recent statement by Commissioner Schroeder, figure that at the rate of one and one-half new pole installations a day it will require twenty-five years to bring about the complete and adequate lighting of the city streets. Mr. Schroeder told of sinking 100 poles in two months.

This is not fast enough for Messers Field and Burns. They would draw on the $200,000 of bonds authorized by the electors but not yet squeezed. They criticize Commissioner Cowgill who, they say, pledged himself to the task of extending the light plant and now finds himself engaged in building a new government.

In suggesting elimination of the 40 cent fixed charge, they say the city gets $16,800 from the item and that two privately owned concerns draw $64,800 annually from it. This $64,800, they say would pay 6 per cent interest on $1,080,000 which, it is alleged, is more than the private companies have in property investment. If $81,600, sum total of the annual collection for fixer charge by all companies, were applied to lighting the streets, complainants contend that it would pay for 2,786 k w's. per hour for 2,650 hours and would produce current sufficient to supply 27,860,100 watt lamps It would, they continue, be sufficient to furnish 528 miles of street lights

At Monday's meeting, L C Burr goes back to the early seventies to clear away the cloud to real estate title He contends that this cloud is the result of erroneous assessment He offers to pay $5 principal tax erroneously levied against one parcel in 1872, forty-two cents on two lots levied in 1873 and 64 cents levide against the same two lots in 1874 He makes this offer, he says, in lieu of his share of taxes which should properly have been levied on one property not properly classified Mr Dayton referred the matter to Cass Attorney Peterson

CHICAGO FORECAST WET

Both Inside and Outside of Citizens There to Be Moist, It Is Reported.

CHICAGO, Dec .31.—The forecast for tonight here is wet—inside and outside.

The weather forecaster says it will rain and bootleggers know from their sales that the new year's celebration in the scores of cafes, grills hotel dining rooms and roadhouses will be very wet.

Vast quantities of moonshine, synthetic gin, sacramental wine, whiskey and other liquors have been and are being sold and the new year promises to ride in on the crest of the biggest wave of liquor since constitutional prohibition was enacted.

Chicago plans to celebrate on a greater scale than ever before, regardless of the cost. Cover charges range from $6 to $20, and they were snapped up weeks ago, proprietors report. Liquor is obtainable all the way from $2 for moonshine to $5 for synthetic gin and $20 for so-called real whiskey

Chief of Police Collins has instructed policemen to be on duty at all public places of entertainment. But the "hip pocket" boys are not worrying.

Your Problems

BY MARY GORDON

Mary Gordon Esteemed Friend:—This is my first and only offense or Attempt we now Say at Trying to Settle an Entanglement of a More Sensative nature than those on the outside Thinking they have a Knowledge of this Case, Know About. If the Call of Home and Decency nad Loyalty of Ligitimate marriage Count for Anything then Surely the Party to Whom this is Addressed Will Allow Conscience to Guide them. An Article Appeared Just before Thanksgiving of a Woman and 3 year Old Baby Who Was Estranged from Her Husband and as She Said (Loved Him Dearly and Knew that He Loved Her, but they told Her He had Been gone too long that He did not Care and Would not return. Whether or not the Article was genuine or Blind and the Works of a Real Woman or of the Fickle Minded I am Not in position to Say. But can Say that the Thanksgiving Spirit at this Home was ruined by the Absence of a Wife and Baby 3 years by Ones who have never ceased to Respect Sacredness of Marriage Vows and the Standards of Womanhood that Should be In Evidence in the Family circle. And Length of Time, miles between contracting Parties change of Scenery and Environment in General have never changed the Ones at Home waiting in Hope that Is about Threadbare for the Reconciliation that Could and Would render happiness. Should the Call of the World and quest of pleasures of that nature, Mar the Call of Home in its real Sense? If so then I am not a Success. But the Months that Have Elapsed and the Silence and Suspense Have Just About ruined the faith to be Respected in All of us. No Mind is Capable of changing me through Some Subtle Influence from First to Wife Baby and Home. We all are Called to Sacrifice but Should the Love of the crowd and money and pleasures of Worldly Element Ruin Respectability and bring Neglect to a child that is Loved and a Wife Also? I feel a Man and Wife should Look Adversity square in the Face at the Time when Domestic Co-operation Should be the Strongest and when we Should turn a Deaf Ear to the Outside Influence. I Sincerely Hope My Wife May chance to See this Appeal to Again Take Her place in the Home in the Very Near future where She is Assured of Welcome to the Fullest and May the Xmas Spirit in the Home not Be Marred by Longer listening to Poison Tongues of the Home Wrecking Element And that the Ones to Whom this applies May be dealt with According to their Works. Mary Gordon if this Epistle in Way of appeal to those Near and Dear to me isn't too long for Publication, I assure you I would ge greatful for it to be printed with all Sincerity and that the Spirit in Which it is Written May be Conveyed to a Wife and Baby Rendering the Susceptibility of Honest Companionship in Her Heart—Loyal to a Fault. A Hrsband.

A. I am publishing this, as your enclosed letter to me suggested, in hope that thru it your wife may be found.

If, as you hint, she is being held in Denver against her will, why do you not appeal to authorities there? It is a mistaken sense of duty which restrains you.

R. L. K. and the Children of the Intermediate Room, Crab Orchard: Your generous box was received The family to whom it was sent thanks you. It was lovely of you.

Dear Mary Gordon: Do you know anything about The Nile Art company, Fort Wayne, Indiana? As to whether they do just as they agree to. If you do not know anything about them would you please publish this letter and if any of the readers know anything about the company they would be doing a great favor by writing about it in the column Please publish answers in the Daily paper because we do not take the Sunday paper—Just Eighteen

A. No, I know nothing of the firm you mention but perhaps some of the readers do

Dear Mary Gordon Will you please give me a few pointers on rules for debating A few evenings ago we had a debate in our club and only the first speaker on the affirmative was given an opportunity for rebutal Shouldn't the negative side have a chance too? And please tell me if each member should have a chance or not. Then the judges sat together and after the debate was over retired to another room and talked the matter over Shouldn't the judges have sat apart and voted without consulting each other?—K.

A. According to the rules of the high school debating league all speakers are given an opportunity for rebuttal. In the course of the debate, a speaker for the affirmative comes first, then a negative and so on. In the rebuttal, a speaker for the negative is first to appear, then an affirmative, etc.

It is customary for the judges to sit separately and turn in their votes. However, by previous agreement, they may confer if they wish.

Tonight's Supper.

One of the things that every housewife should own is a plank for steaks and fish. All that is required is a good thick oak board, well oiled and shaped like a platter This utensil will serve many purposes in preparing delectable dinners in the course of a year, and also will give the home chef opportunity to eliminate the aftermath of dishes, and serve her meal attractively.

Having a preference for the plank as a cooking utensil, try a menu of planked steak surrounded by a mound of mashed sweet or white potatoes, and another ring of baked buttered onions. A pear salad, a dessert of fresh gingerbread spread with whipped cream and a cup of fresh coffee will complete your menu.

Of course, if you haven't the plank, you can use a glass cooking platter or you can broil the steak in the old way, put it on the platter and surround with the vegetables.

But for the planked variety of dinner, heat the plank and lay on your steak. Put it in a hot oven to broil, and when about done, surround with the potatoes which have first been mashed and seasoned. Brush the top of the potatoes with beaten egg white, set the baked onions in a ring around the outside, dot with butter and return the whole to the oven to brown.

Your pear salad is made from halves of pears, the centers filled with pecan nut meats, and served in hearts of lettuce with mayonnaise dressing, garnished with maraschino or preserved cherries.

The gingerbread dessert is plain, fresh gingerbread topped with whipped cream. To make it a bit better, the gingerbread can be first spread with apricot jam before the cream is put on.

FOUGHT OIL TRUST, BROKE

Henry Childs, Who Once Had Fortune in Oil, Dies Penniless at Age of Eighty.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 31.—Henry Childs, eighty, the man who bucked Rockfeller and who once had a fortune in oil, recently died penniless in the city hospital here.

Inheriting a quarter of a million dollars at the time the oil industry was beginning to boom, Childs saw possibilities in the "flowing gold," and invested heavily in the Pennsylvania fields.

So powerful did Childs and his group of associates become that John D. Rockfeller, when he formed the Standard Oil company, invited Childs to join forces with him.

Childs decided to continue operating independently. But he wasn't able to buck the Standard Oil Gradually he was forced to dispose of his oil holdings.

At about the same time the war with the Standard turned against him, other business interests went bad.

Large turpentine holdings in Florida failed to make profit, and extensive claims in the gold fields near Cripple Creek, Colo., were taken from him

At sixty he was broke. The last twenty years of his life he was dependent upon a daughter

CONGRESS IS FACING TASK

TWO HOUSES TO TAKE UP THEIR WORK THURSDAY.

Little Promise for Year But Strife and Political Struggle—Tax Reduction Bill to Be Reported Soon.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Congress returns this week to a new year that promises little but strife and political struggle

When the two houses take up their work on Thursday, the situation they will face is to the principal legislation of the session is this.

Tax reduction: The house ways and means committee is to begin hearings immediately with prospects that the bill will be reported within six weeks. Democrats in the senate have drawn a bill which may be pressed as the official democrat substitute.

Railroads: Senate deadlock over the chairmanship of the interstate commerce committee continues Smith, democrat, will be elected unless sufficient democrats are "late" returning from their Christmas vacations. In this case, Cummins, the regular republican, will win Work to repeal the Esch-Cummins law will be undertaken early

Farm relief: Nothing in sight in either house.

Russian recognition. Senator Borah will be appointed chairman of a special sub-committee of the senate foreign relation committee immediately to find the truth about alleged circulation of supposed "red" propaganda in the United States. Hearings will be begun before the end of January and state department witnesses will be called first to present their charges against the soviets, upon which Secretary Hughes based his refusal of recognition to Russia.

Bonus: Will be rushed thru as early as possible in both houses. May be made a rider to the tax reduction bill to forestall a veto. No hearings will be held. Impartial senators and observers believe that it will not pass over a presidential veto.

Prohibition: The light wines and beer bloc is planning a campaign of speeches. Senator Edge will press for hearing on his modification bills.

Senator Edwards with Representative Newton of Minnesota will seek investigation of the latest capital booze scandal in which cabinet officials and congressmen are involved, according to some witnesses held by police.

Politics:

This will be the biggest business before the senate until the tax reduction bill or the bonus comes over from the house. Big political "bloc" composed of presidential candidates and their followers will be on the road half the time making speeches and many attacks are being planned from the floor. The senate will be the principal political forum for the next six months.

Ku Klux Klan: Senate hearing on charges that election of Senator Earle B. Mayfield of Texas violated election laws will begin within a week. Hearings will be drawn out and it is doubtful whether final action can be attained for use in the presidential campaign. The ku klux klan is the real issue in this case.

AFTER THE HONEYMOON

A NEW "MARRIED LIFE" SERIES

—By Fay Stevenson Copyright, 1923, Press Publishing Company

The Office Force.

"It's a good thing for you to look your husband's stenographers over," whispered Joyce as they entered Alan's office "When Bill and I were married I had him discharge two girls before I found the right one The one he has now is fat and short and has bobbed hair which looks like a mop in the front and fringe in the back."

"Didn't you feel you could trust Bill?"

Joyce gave Sylvia one of her arched eyebrow stares "Say, dearie, I haven't seen a man I could trust yet!" she chirped. "Now, Sylvia, you can dismiss your maid and do your own work if you like, but I insist upon your looking over the girls your husband employs. Let's see if we can find the one he took to lunch with him today."

"He didn't take her to lunch for pleasure," declared Sylvia. "I saw him dictate four letters to her."

"I know; but that's the way those things begin."

"Well, you aren't going to make me jealous of my own husband"

"Aren't I?" mimicked Joyce. "Ah, look who's here! The fairy princess who had luncheon with your husband is just arriving. I suppose she took the subway down"

"Yes, she didn't have a Garrison McQuade to put her in a taxi," countered Sylvia.

"Garrison is all right; you needn't make fun of him."

"Well, I certainly don't intend to tell Bill you're home the next time you take a stroll with him."

"Come, let's not bicker," laughed Joyce good naturedly. "Honestly, do you like the looks of that girl, Sylvia?"

The girl, a slim young person of about twenty, was highly rouged and wore a sleeveless velvet gown. A raccoon coat and soft felt hat lay on her desk, while she powdered her nose and touched up her lips before typing the letters Alan had dictated to her.

"I can't say that she looks so very much different from countless girls I see going to work every day in the subway," replied Sylvia. "If she does the work, I don't suppose it is any of Alan's affair how she dresses. There is another type of girl opposite her. She is wearing a shirtwaist and skirt and arranges her hair so that most of her ears show. She looks like a frump, but at heart she may be a bigger vamp than the little girl who is trying so hard to be beautiful."

"If you asked me," said Joyce, "I'd have Alan fire them both and get men secretaries."

"If you ask me," returned Sylvia, "I'd let Alan run his own business. Joyce, you nearly made me waste Alan's money on a maid, but you're not going to interfere with my life any more!"

DANGER OF RIOTS OVER

ARKANSAS TROOPS ARE WITHDRAWN FROM VAN BUREN.

Ten Negroes Taken Into Custody After White Population Had Threatened Them From Outside Their Barricade.

FORT SMITH, Ark, Dec. 31.—Troops sent to Van Buren to quiet threatened rioting in the vicinity were ordered withdrawn after all danger of an outbreak was believed passed.

The troops took ten negroes into custody after the men had barricaded themselves in a house and prepared to resist a threatened attack by the white population.

Bad feeling started with the murder of Mrs. Robert Lattimer, Friday. One negro under arrest confessed to the slaying and implicated two others.

Crowds of white people began gathering and rumors were heard of a general attack being planned on the colored population. Many negroes left the vicinity while others barricaded themselves in their homes. The ten arrested were charged with night riding. A grand jury will start an investigation of the murder of Mrs. Larrimer on Wednesday.

BOND MARKET WAS ACTIVE

European Capital Coming Into America Boosted Business Toward End of Year.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Toward the end of the year an interesting phenomenon with historical importance was registered in the security markets. The pound sterling in its flight from probable increases in tax levies as an aftermath of the recent election in Britain, has found its way into the American investment markets on a comparatively large scale. The substantial gains made by the labor party in England at the last election carried the threat of a capital tax, so much of a threat that the British security markets were greatly disturbed and British balances in foreign lands were increased.

For the first time in history, European capital is fleeing to America on the eve of a conflict, this time a political conflict, with threats of worse in the offing War threats on the continent had already sent German funds, as well as loose funds of the weaker countries, into the London market for sanctuary, but now the general exodus is to America.

Rail bonds are well known in Europe and it is in these that much of the foreign buying has occurred of late. Seasoned industrials, such as the steels and the coppers have been well taken.

In a general way the foreign demand has enabled our market to digest rapidly the plethora of new issues that have been thrust out during the past few months. Financing during 1923 has been in cycles. At the start of the year foreign loans were in demand and banking houses offered large issues early and often. When the demand slackened rails were taken up and then public utilities. As the year closed the new offerings included a mixture of nearly every type of bonds that has been put out during the year.

FOUR MAKE BOLD ESCAPE

ATLANTA FEDERAL PENITENTIARY LOSES INMATES.

Fugitives Include Participator in Mail Truck Holdup, Two Counterfeiters and a Mail Robber.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 31.—All law enforcemnet agencies of the south today concentrated on the search for four prisoners who made a daring escape from the federal penitentiary here Sunday.

Three of the men were traced to Macon but there the trail was lost No clew as to the whereabouts of the fourth has been found.

The fugitives include George Anderson, serving a twenty-five-year sentence for participation in a $1,000,000 mail truck holdup in New York. Anderson was the partner of Gerald Chapman, who escaped last March and has not been recaptured. Prison officials believe Anderson engineered Sunday's escape. The men crawled to freedom thru a tunnel under a concrete wall encircling the prison.

The other three convicts who escaped were:

Hiram Lepper, sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment from Baltimore for counterfeiting.

Frank Haynes, sentenced from Chattanooga for counterfeiting.

Ludwig Schmidt, sentenced for robbing the mails from Rochester, N. Y.

Lepper figured in a former jail delivery and was recaptured in Milwaukee

Prison officials were advised recently that Anderson contemplated a break for liberty and took extra precautions to guard him The tunnel dug under the prison walls led from a small tent in the pri[illegible] tubercular zone to a point just beyond the high stone walls, where armed guards paced constantly Lepper and Haynes occupied the tent

The loose dirt was carried secretly from the tent to a [illegible] graded spot seventy-five feet away

A small shovel and a miniature miner's lantern were found in the tunnel, the only equipment used in digging the passageway to freedom The tunnel was equipped with [illegible] door, steps were built in the h[illegible] clay

The delivery was discovered at 7 p m Reports were received that the men had been seen in a negro quarter nearby and then a [illegible] came that they had boarded a [illegible] headed for Macon

NOT STIRRED OVER RACE

COUNTRY IS UNENTHUSIASTIC OVER CANDIDATES.

Klan Issue Looms as Cause of Political Passion and Wet and Dry Fight Slated to Bring on Hysteria.

By Lawrence Martin

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The presidential year which dawns tomorrow finds the country much less disturbed than on many previous occasions when a national election was in prospect.

At the moment the country is not deeply stirred over presidential politics but the makings of a great surge of national feeling are there, in issues which will be utilized to the fullest by campaigners.

The ku klux klan issue, sinister because it involves appeals to prejudice and bigotry, looms as a certain cause of political passion. The wet and dry fight now organizing on an unprecedented scale, is brim full of those elements that cause political hysteria. Tax reduction and the soldier bonus, the refusal to recognize Russia and a tentative and experimental dip into the European reparations problem are also potential disturbance makers.

As the year begins, the situation as regards the various candidates and probable candidates is:

Coolidge. The president is by far in the best position, at the moment, of any candidate. His appeal has been emphatically to the sober, conservative element and his policies have been shaped to support the appeal to this side of the national consciousness. To beat him will be necessary to convince the country that some other has a program more promising to prosperity and leadership than Mr. Coolidge offers.

Hiram Johnson: He has not yet begun to fight. The character of his fighting will be revealed this week when he makes his first real campaign speech in Cleveland. Meanwhile, Frank Hitchcock, his experienced campaign manager has been organizing quietly. Opposed by the republican organization Johnson to all intents and purposes, must make his fight as an insurgent. That is a tactical advantage.

The McAdoo Boom

Everybody says McAdoo cannot win the democratic nomination but everybody seems to be afraid of him. Combinations innumerable are being made to beat him. What his opponents are afraid of now is that McAdoo will try to make an agreement with La Follette, republican insurgent, to get the potential "third party" progressive strength.

gent, to get the potential "third party" under way this month in Ohio. He has quite a bit of strength in the support of business me but how much this will amount to, cannot be forecast because it is too early.

Cox: Not actually in the race but expected to be by January 28

La Follette: The enigma. Has been too ill to take a personal part in politics lately but controlling as he does much liberal strength, his probable course excites much speculation.

The speakership contest was the principal topic of conversation about hotel lobbies. Clark seemed to be ahead of Haller, Pollard, Fisher and Rouse.

R. C. Hughes, president of Tabor college, Iowa, was in the city consulting with E. J. Burkett, a member of the board of trustees, over erection of a new building.

IMMENSE CATHEDRAL ONE-THIRD COMPLETED

Today, thirty-one years after the cornerstone of the great cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York city, planned as the world's greatest Episcopal cathedral, was laid, the edifice is just one-third completed. Efforts are being made to raise $15,000,000 to carry on the work of construction.

MR. POOL ACCEPTS HONOR

Becomes a Democratic Nominee for Secretary of State as Result of Petition of Voters.

Charles W. Pool, secretary of state has been induced by petitioners to accept renomination for his present office. In reply to a petition filed by forty Lincoln voters Mr. Pool made this statement Monday:

"I have this day filed an acceptance of the petition of forty men and women asking that I become a candidate of the democratic party for secretary of state. It is an honor which has come to but few men, only seventeen since Nebraska became a state, and I am deeply appreciative of the compliment thus extended. If elected it will be my constant aim to conduct the affairs of the office in a business-like manner, endeavoring at all time to give the public my best personal efforts, together with efficiency and economy in each department under my supervision. January 4 last I assumed office and during the year just closed the cash receipts of the office totaled $176,334.73 as against $167,361.68 the preceding twelve months, or in other words receipts were $8,973.05 greater and the expense of conducting the office $1,564.82 less than the preceding year.

"As a member of the state taxation board it was my privilege and pleasure to assist in reducing state taxes almost a million dollars for the current year, and it will be my constant aim in the future to give to each individual the same courteous treatment that has been accorded in the past.

"I have been a resident of Nebraska many years and as a farmer, boy, student, printer's devil, journeyman printer, editor and publisher, president of state press association, member of the city council, president of the city library board, secretary of the county fair association, speaker of the house of representatives of the Nebraska legislature, deputy state labor commissioner and secretary of state, I have contributed some small part at least in the development of the state and the betterment of her people. In turn I have received most loyal help from the voters of the state—which impels me to believe that my past experience will be of some value to the public and I am ready and willing [illegible] two years as [illegible]

GOOD YEAR IS PROMISE

LEADING BUSINESS MEN OF CHICAGO OPTIMISTIC.

Revival of Business Forecast, With All Lines Except Clothing and Leather Industries Recovered.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Leading business men of Chicago are confident that 1924 holds promise of increasing prosperity.

Annual statements issued today point to healthy advances made during 1923, and predict excellent business for the new year.

James B. Forgan, chairman of the board of directors of the First National bank of Chicago and the First Trust and Savings bank, said that business this year still felt the influence of the depression of 1921. At the same time, the year marked a revival of business, he said.

"The outlook for the future may be termed a hopeful one," he said.

Practically every line of business, with the exception of the clothing and leather industries, has recovered from the war, Forgan stated. Agriculture is much better off than it is generally believed, he said, and even the wheat farmer is in much better shape than he is thought to be.

The greatest stimulus to business would be peace in Europe, he said. Until Europe is back on its feet, the world will not know the full measure of prosperity, he warned.

Forgan urged congress to stop tinkering with the laws and stated it could do no greater service to the country than "to let well enough alone."

America's grain trade has passed thru its most distressing period and the future is bright for agriculture, John S. Stream, president of the Chicago board of trade, asserted. While the grain exchange does not believe in cooperative marketing, nevertheless it has not opposed the idea, Stream said. "Utter failure" of the cooperatives was forecast by Stream unless practical grain men are given a place in the organization.

A tremendous building program is in store for 1924, Thomas J. Vernia, president o fthe Indiana limestone quarrymen's association, declared. This year established new records, he said. The average weekly volume approximated $60,000,000, which is $6,000,000 over the weekly average for 1922.

"Economists and business analysts agree that upon the amount of construction will depend the general state of business in 1924," he said. "Judged on that basis the logical conclusion is that the new year will see general prosperity in America."

Meat production during 1923 was the greatest in the history of America, Thomas E Wilson, president of Wilson and company, declared. The 1922 figures have been exceeded by 1,500,000,000 pounds, he estimated. The increase is due largely to hog production. Europe purchased from 30 to 50 per cent more meat than in 1922, he stated.

As the meat business is a fair barometer of business, prosperity in this country is general he said

CHARGES STRIKE ATTEMPT

Editor of Mine Workers' Journal Declares Non-Union Operators Trying to Force Walkout.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Non-union coal operators are trying to force a bituminous coal strike April next because of the "millions of unholy profits" a strike would mean to them, Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers Journal charge here today.

No one can say whether there will be a strike or not yet, Searles said, but if the efforts of non-union operators are frustrated "there is every good reason for the belief that coal mining will go right on without interruption."

The public wants to know whether there will be a strike of bituminous coal miners on the first day of next April. A large and powerful element among the coal operators of the country are doing everything in their power to force a strike and if they succeed there will be a suspension of mining on that date, Searles said.

"Chief among these forces are the non-union operators of West Virginia, Kentucky, Maryland and southern Pennsylvania. If they can so manipulate matters as to cause a shutdown of the unionized mines north of the Ohio river, the non-union mines can then continue at work.

"They will operate at full capacity, produce all the coal possible and sell it at profiteering prices just as they did in the 1922 strike, which they caused. Not only can they sell their coal at the outrageous prices, but they can steal the markets away from the union operators. That's the goal they are playing for.

"A suspension in union fields will mean millions of unholy profits to these non-union coal companies."

"The United Mine Workers of America does not want a strike. What the miners want is work and plenty of it," Searles concluded

SHOW PICTURES TO PUBLIC

Painters Refused Showing in Exhibitions Will Submit to Judgment of Laymen in Art.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. Political conventions have their rump sessions and art exhibitions their Salons des Refuses."

Painters whose works are rejected for an exhibition sometimes take [illegible] unwanted paintings off, neatly hang out a sign, Salon des Refuses" meaning an exhibition of refused paintings, and invite the [illegible] to judge for itself if [illegible] refuses aren't as good as those picked for the main show.

One of these "salons" was opened here yesterday, the offshoot of the fourth biennial exhibition of contemporary American oil paintings which opened at the Corcoran Gallery of Art on December 16 the great event of the American art world.

The management of the Corcoran gallery has long been aware of the human fallibility of juries of selection and award and to test the degree to which their prize awards accord with the judgment of the less tutored public, they have established a popular prize to be awarded to the painting which received the largest number of votes cast by the public. The vote this year will be during the week beginning today. The ballots will be counted and the prize awarded January 7.

Past verdicts of the public have never been in accord with the awards of the jury.

JAPAN SEEKING AID FOR HER LIBRARIES

Turns to America for Help in Replacing Burned Treasures—Generous Response Is Indicated.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(United Press.)—Dr. Kenzo Takayanagi, professor of English law in the Tokio Imperial university, has arrived in New York to seek the aid of American educational institutions, publishers and the various departments of the American government in the difficult task of replenishing the university library, which was almost totally destroyed by the recent earthquake and fire.

"The Tokio Imperial library had a library of 800,000 volumes, of which more than half were in oriental languages. About 550,000 which were in the main library building, were destroyed," said Takayanagi "Books of scientific nature which were scattered in laboratories and scientific buildings, fortunately escaped destruction. The law library, which was in the law building, was also burned."

This, said Takayanagi, is a great blow, not only to Japan, but to the civilization of the world.

Professor Takayanagi has been in Washington, where he received great encouragement from those interested in the advancement of learning. The library of congress, the Carnegie endowment, the Smithsonian Institution, and various governmental departments are taking interest in Dr. Takayanagi's appeal. The congress library is collecting government publications for him. The international law division of the Carnegie endowment has resolved to appeal to various organizations for contribution of books. Dr. J. F. Jameson, director of the department of historical research of the Carnegie Institute of Washington, has issued similar appeals. The international exchange of the Smithsonian institution will undertake the shipping of the books.

URGES CUT IN ACREAGE

Coolidge in Letter to Wheat Council Advocates That Method for Wheat Growers.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Reduction of wheat acreage to insure against overproduction was advocated by President Coolidge in a letter made public here today by the wheat council of the United States.

The president urged a "methodical approach to the underlying problems the farmers confront."

"The effort, in an organized and systematic way, to establish such a measure of control over wheat acreage as will measurably insure against overproduction is altogether to be commended," the communication stated.

"Almost every important business except agriculture, has trade organization and associations thru which it is possible to deal with such vitally important matters."

President Coolidge also advocated a concerted move to increase the demand for wheat products thru established methods of business exploitation.

The temperature at Butte, Mont., dropped to below zero.

Of Vital Interest to all Girls is Miriam's fight for Her Good Name and Her Ultimate Success.

Copyright, 1923, by The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Miriam Folwell spends the day at an out-of-the-way place with Warren Holmes, a man she knows only slightly. They miss the last train back and Holmes asks her to be his wife. Angrily she refuses.

CHAPTER IV.

Back to the Past.

Miriam Folwell spent her childhood in a small town near Buffalo, N. Y. Her mother died when she was eight, her father when she was still younger, and she lived with her uncle and aunt until she was eighteen, when she had come to the city to win her way. Her aunt had always spoken of her as a strange child, and certainly Miriam was not at all like the stolid, low-headed children who were her cousins and true children of their parents.

She was dreamy and imaginative. She liked being alone, and she was always self-conscious and strange with children of her own age. Her aunt, Mrs. Hobson, was kind, but she felt uncomfortable with Miriam. She looked forward to the time when the girl would marry and have a home of her own, but it wasn't long before she realized that there was no one in the town that Miriam would condescend to notice.

Delia Hobson, who was two years younger than Miriam, was what her mother called a normal girl. She had no "high-falutin' ideas," and when Ezra Clark, the drug clerk, showed a disposition to call, Delia was sensibly responsive, and gave every indication of marrying young and having two or three babies before she was twenty-five.

Miriam was different. It wasn't that she was snobbish, she was pleasant enough with everyone, but there was an air of quiet reserve about her, there was an even look in her eyes when they rested on a man that seemed to see beneath the surface of things.

She was not beautiful, but she was exquisitely made. Her feet and hands were long and slim, her ankles were small-boned and delicate, and she carried her slender body so well that she seemed to sway rather than walk. Delia, like her mother, was large and capable and stolid. Miriam was like a princess, the simplest clothes gave her distinction, and she was happiest when she was cutting into material and making a dress for herself.

When she was eighteen she had a serious talk with her uncle and aunt. She wanted to go to the city and study dress designing. If they would advance $500 she would pay it back with interest just as soon as she was self-supporting.

This sounded like a wild scheme to Luke Hobson. Five hundred dollars was a lot of money and how could he be sure that Miriam would make good? He shook his head, he used every argument he could think of to persuade the girl to remain in Burnside, but there was a quiet purpose about Miriam, and a great deal of logic in what she had to say. Here she could do nothing. She would probably never marry, and she would be a burden to them always. But in the city she could make good, she was sure of it and she would never ask them for another penny.

"But if you shouldn't make good, if you used up all your money, what then?" Mrs. Hobson asked tearfully, "I couldn't sleep nights thinking of it. Would you come back if you found you couldn't make a go of it?"

Miriam leaned over and took her aunt's toil-worn fingers in her. "Of course I would, but it won't be necessary. You wait and see. I'll make good and I'll pay back every cent of the money you lend me."

And so it was that Luke Hobson, against his own judgment, gave Miriam the $500, and in spite of her self, altho she called herself a wicked woman, Mrs. Hobson breathed a sigh of relief when Miriam left.

"I've done my best for Ethel's child, anyway," she said tearfully to her husband, "but somehow she never was one of us. I couldn't get close to her and perhaps it's all for the best that things have come out this way."

The annual business meeting of the association will be held after the mass meeting of all organizations on Thursday afternoon. The meeting has been called at the Lincoln hotel at five o'clock.

Farm Union Sues Directors.

AURORA, Neb., Dec. 30. — The farmers' union co-operative association of Horville, together with its board of directors has brought suit against about fifty of its stockholders praying that judgment may be had for the amount of the stock held by those stockholders. This company purchased a store in Hordville and the board of directors signed the note to procure the money. It is alleged in the petition that the directors did not cause to be published the notice of indebtedness which is required in the statute and that for this reason the stockholders can be forced to pay an amount equal to the stock held by them. It is reported that some of the stockholders have paid this assessment while those who are now sued absolutely refuse to pay

FIGHT OVER FARM BUDGET

Gage County Bureau's Action Is the Cause of a Heated Discussion.

BEATRICE, Neb., Dec 30 —Frank C. Crocker, prominent in the affairs of farm organizations of the state, is waging a fight against the budget of the Gage county farm bureau, recently adopted. The board of directors of the bureau, at a session preliminary to the annual meeting, unanimously reelected L. Boyd Rist as county agent.

Mr. Crocker, in statements given to local newspapers, insists that this action should not have been taken until the bureau, at its annual meeting, had an opportunity to readjust the budget for the coming year and to arrange for continuing the campaign for the eradication of tuberculosis. Mr. Crocker insists that Gage county farmers would have received an added cash bonus for their hogs shipped to market in 1922 if the bureau had made the county a tuberculosis free area. Around 200 cars of hogs were shipped out of Beatrice that year. The matter is to be brought before the members of bureau at the coming meeting.

FIVE SMALL FIRES SUNDAY

Desire for Warmth Causes Overtaxing of Stoves and Furnaces in City.

The number of fire alarms was increased, Sunday because of the cold snap. A seasonable desire for warmth led to the over taxing of stoves and furnaces with the result that five alarms were turned in by the middle of the afternoon.

At 2:16 a. m. the fire department was called to the ash pile of Abel Construction company at Sixth and J streets. No damage was done.

Then Northwestern baggage room put in a call at 7:16 a. m., when an over heated furnace caused a small blaze. The damage was slight.

Some alcohol exploded at the Cornhusker filling station, Thirteenth and High at 11:30 a. m. No damage is reported. The station is owned by Harrison brothers.

Two house fires were reported early in the afternoon, one at 2119 T, resulting from a flue burning out, no damage resulting; the other at 2331 Dudley, the home of F. L. Martin, where the papering caught fire from an over heated furnace. No damage was done. Some one saw steam pouring from a bath room window at the home of Mrs. Cane, 211 South Eighteenth, and turned in an alarm at 3:44 p. m.

INVENTS DEEP SEA DREDGE

Californian Has Designs on Six Billion Dollar Treasure Lying on Sea Bottom.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 31.—The refusal of the seven seas to surrender ships that have been battered to pieces in the shallow depths may be defeated if the plans of John A De Vito of Los Angeles materialize De Vito has invented a device, which is really nothing except a gigantic dredge, which he states will restore 85 per cent of the now sunken ships to the service.

"The law of the sea is that to the finder goes the spoils," he asserts. "The total value of the treasures in sunken ships will never be known, but a fortune of $6,500,000,000 is known to have gone down in only eighteen of the many thousand boats that have been lost in the past century."

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

When Richard Second Held the Centre of the Stage.

HARRIET BRAITHWAITE, herself, was the first to recover from the bomb which Junior had just sent off. Although she must have known from the child's lisping but perfectly clear utterances that her mother had referred to her as "an anointed idiot over Edwin," she did not permit even a hint of annoyance to cloud her eyes as she stooped and kissed my small son again.

"I imagine I am, dear," she said simply.

"I fought so," Junior observed gravely, "but Danzie finks you know more now. She told Auntie Lilian dat——"

But what my poor mother-in-law, flushed and perspiring, had told Lilian concerning her daughter was silenced in the chorus of warning exclamations which descended upon Junior's luckless head. Even Marion, with perception beyond her years, joined in attempts to distract his attention which her mother and I promptly set in motion. Mother Graham, herself, however, swiftly regaining her poise, lifted her head in a gallant maintenance of her position.

Love No Disgrace.

"Well, I did say it!" she asseverated stoutly. "I'm not going to lie about it. And it's no disgrace, that I ever heard of, for a woman to be devoted to her husband. But I do think you've put him too much above your own flesh and blood, Harriet, and that I'll say with my dying breath, like it or lump it, as you please."

I looked anywhere but at Lilian, for as it was I had my work cut out for me to control my laughter muscles, and my embarrassed, roving gaze caught my mother-in-law's eyes and set fire to them as might a match to dry pine cones. Characteristically, she struck out blindly, as might something wounded, instinctively seizing upon the surest way to hurt me.

"As for you, Richard Second," she said in a majestic voice, "you are a very bad boy to repeat things you hear. I am angry at you. But, then, I suppose I can expect nothing else."

Her tone intimated that it was useless for her to try to combat the effects of my injudicious training. But I cared no whit for the slur. I did dread intensely, however, any hurt to my little lad's feelings, and I knew that he had intended no harm. His propensity for repeating things with uncanny precision in season and out of season would have to be curbed, but I flattered myself that I could accomplish the task without humiliating his baby pride.

The Laughter Is Infectious.

I expected a tempestuous burst of sobs, but instead Junior drew his straight, plump little body erect and faced his grandmother with eyes so ludicrously like her own in argument that I bit my lips hard to keep back the smile twisting them.

"Me NOT Richard Second," he said stoutly, lapsing into the baby talk he rapidly has been shedding. "Me Dooner, Dicky-Bird Graham Dooner. Richard Second, dat's a dumb-bell name, you bet your boots."

He brought the last words out in so emphatic and realistic an imitation of Katie that iron hands could not have held our risibles. Lilian, Harriet and I exploded into laughter, but Mother Graham turned with awful hauteur upon me.

"I hope you are satisfied, Margaret," she began icily, "with the result of your ridiculous training. The child not only flaunts my authority, but denies the name which is the only proper one for him to have, and substitutes that chimpanzee appellation that my son's fool friends have given him. When I think of how I have slaved and sacrificed for my——"

I knew the rest of the coming speech by heart, but it was not that which made me interrupt her. I saw that underneath her apparent arrogance and ill-temper she was sorely hurt and humiliated. Her adored grandson not only had embarrassed her in the eyes of her daughter whom she had not seen for so long, but had flouted her authority publicly. This to a woman who prided herself upon her discipline was unbearable. It was the consciousness that unwittingly my child had spoiled her reunion with her daughter which made me step to her side and slip my arm around her.

"Mother, dear," I said, "forgive us for laughing, but he was so funny in his naughtiness, Junior!" I spoke authoritatively to my small son, "come and tell Grandma you are sorry you were rude to her, and that Richard Second is a nice name."

THE HOME KITCHEN

Good Cookies That All Children Can Make Themselves

By JEANNETTE YOUNG NORTON
The Authority on Home Cooking.

CHILDREN love to help make goodies for the visitor, and their energy and enthusiasm only need to be directed into the right channels to make them a real help. The following recipes are prized by one little girl who helps Mother frequently when she is preparing for company. One of these cakes a little girl christened "Hit or Miss," for all the ingredients go in at once instead of in the orderly way which most recipes require:

Hit or Miss Cakes.

Mix one cupful of sugar, one and a half cupfuls of flour, one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, the whites of two eggs, a half cupful of melted butter and a half cupful of sweet cream. Beat all these ingredients in a mixing-bowl for five minutes, then add a teaspoonful of vanilla. Fill little warm, buttered muffin-pans three-quarters full and bake the cakes. Could anything be easier?

Peanut Cookies.

Mix two tablespoonfuls of butter with a quarter cupful of sugar, one beaten egg, one-half cupful of flour sifted with a half teaspoonful of baking-powder, two tablespoonfuls of milk, a saltspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of chopped peanuts, one teaspoonful of vanilla and a little grated nutmeg. Mix the batter well, then drop it by the spoonful onto a buttered tin, leaving an inch between each cooky.

Midgets.

Mix together one cupful of butter and one and a half cupfuls of sugar. When they are mixed add three beaten eggs, one cupful of seeded and chopped raisins, a little chopped citron, a teaspoonful of mixed spices, a teaspoonful of vanilla and enough flour to make a soft but firm dough. Roll out the dough on a lightly-floured board, cut in fancy shapes with a cutter and bake it in a greased pan. The cookies may be frosted and a nut may be placed in the centre of each if desired.

Gadgets.

Cream together one cupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter. Add a cupful of flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder, a level teaspoonful of cinnamon. After mixing the batter well, add a beaten egg and a half cupful of milk. Spread very thinly on a buttered baking sheet and bake. When the cake is nearly done sprinkle it with sugar. When it is brown cut it into squares and remove quickly with a thin knife or spatula. These are thin, crisp cookies and are very good.

Molasses Cookies.

Pour a cupful of molasses into the mixing-bowl and mix with it a tablespoonful of ground ginger. Dissolve a teaspoonful of baking soda in two tablespoonfuls of warm milk and stir the mixture into the molasses. Add a third of a cupful of soft, warm butter and flour enough to make a soft dough. Turn the dough onto a floured board and roll it out about a half inch in thickness, then with a floured cutter cut out the cookies and place them in a shallow buttered pan. Bake the cookies in a quick oven. This makes [illegible] soft cookies—the kind that are good with apple sauce or jam.

THE day! The hour! The kiss! Yonder in high watch-tower the clock strikes twelve. Chimes ring to herald the entrance of a new year. And she, who'd planned a surprise—for the new year is Leap Year—finds herself the receiver and not the giver. This year, then, is no different from the rest. Forever and aye, whether it be Leap Year or no, man shall be the lover and woman the loved one. For so it is willed, and one day added to the year cannot change the world.

WINIFRED BLACK SHOWS US THE Father and Son Difference

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

A MAN made a speech about "Dads" in Father and Son Week out West the other day.

It was a good speech and it showed that the man knew exactly what he was talking about.

He said that the time had come when fathers had to stop acting as if they were superior to their sons.

"Son can show Dad up at golf and swimming.

"He can ride better and walk further. He's a better dancer. He can eat more kinds of things at more late suppers and never turn a hair.

"He can box better and run better and play better baseball, and he's a better hand at tennis.

"Also, he's a better love maker, he's better looking and he wears clothes better than Dad. Why should he look up to Father and pretend that he believes all the old-fashioned nonsense about Father?

"The fact is, Son has Dad's number. Dad might just as well admit it and let it go at that."

Pleasant little homily, isn't it?—especially for Dad.

Yet I don't know as I blame the man who made it for saying what he did.

He's Son himself and not Dad yet. That may have something to do with it.

And between you and me, every word he said was true—oh, yes, it was, Dad, no matter whether you like it or not.

If you're a natural, normal, average man of forty-five your son of twenty-three or four can out-swim and out-run and out-box and out-tennis and out-ride and out-walk and out-dance you.

Why shouldn't he?

He has twenty years the advantage of you and then you're a little bit tired of that sort of thing—or you ought to be—and he's just crazy about every one of them.

Especially the dancing.

And, Dad, if you can dance as well as any twenty-year-old boy just out of college, or just into college for that matter, don't be proud of the fact.

Each Age Has Own Virtues

You ought to be just the least little bit in the world ashamed of it.

Twenty has certain virtues of its own: Son believes people more easily than you do.

He spends his money easier—he doesn't have to earn it, you see.

He makes friends easier and he forgives his enemies more readily than you do.

He hasn't your common sense, or your caution, or your cynical disbelief in the good motives of the average acquaintance.

He wouldn't be worth a snap if he did have these things.

A young fellow of twenty who isn't clever enough to make a fool of himself at least once in six weeks will never amount to much.

What we want in youth and what we're almost sure to get is impulse, gayety, the joy of living, easy laughter, quick tears, bright enthusiasm. And what we want with age is wisdom, discretion, understanding, balance.

These qualities do not come in twins.

Any old man of forty-five who's making himself believe that any pretty girl in the world would rather go to a dance with him than with his son of twenty-five is a fool, unless there's something radically wrong with Son.

Youth clings to youth; and in youth not only the heart and the body must be youthful, but the mind must be youthful, too.

Don't Compete with Your Son

How long can you stand it, Mr. Forty-five, to sit and listen to a bunch of kids telling each other jokes on "Prof. This" or "Prof. That"? You've heard all those jokes a thousand times. You've told them yourself a hundred times. You really cannot endure them many times more.

Why try? Why pretend?

Why compete with your son in the things at which it is only right and natural he should distance you?

You're not as supple, not as light-footed, not as light-hearted as he is. But you are, or you ought to be, saner and wiser and wittier, and you ought to have ten times the common sense.

But if you pretend that you're as young as he is in every way you simply show that you have no common sense at all. And how can you expect Son to pretend that he thinks you have?

I ask you.

YOUR HEALTH

Treatment You Must Follow In Case Some One Has a Fit

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

DR. COPELAND

THERE are a number of English words we do not like. They are almost as positive in their effects upon the ear as is profanity. One such word is fit.

To have a fit of any kind must be a terrible experience. Whether it is a mild distortion, or one of those body-twisting, muscle-contracting, facial-distorting convulsions, it is an unhappy thing for victim and onlooker.

There may be frothing at the mouth, struggling, biting of the tongue, screaming, talking or singing. There may be bending backward of the body, so that it rests on the heels and head. There may be apparent unconsciousness and very faint breathing.

These are among the many symptoms or groups of symptoms which are popularly described by the one word fit.

Convulsions or fit-like attacks are found in epilepsy, Jacksonian epilepsy, tetany and hysteria. Infants are liable to have convulsions under the conditions which produce chills in grown persons.

If you are at all familiar with the convulsive diseases and those which have convulsions among their manifestations you will know at once what ailment you are confronting.

In epilepsy the attack comes on suddenly. With a loud cry the victim falls to the ground and passes at once into the fit. The eyes and head are drawn to one side. The muscles of the chest and abdomen are so rigidly contracted that breathing may be interfered with seriously. The teeth close down on the tongue, causing it to bleed and the corners of the mouth become foam-covered.

Jacksonian epilepsy generally attacks grown men, differing from epilepsy, which appears in early life in both sexes. There are convulsive movements of the muscles of the limbs or face. The twitchings always begin in the same muscle and proceed for some time before consciousness is disturbed, if at all.

You see this is entirely different from true epilepsy—where there is always complete and immediate loss of consciousness.

In tetany there are muscular spasms in the hands or feet, and more rarely in the face or elsewhere. The contraction may last several days, or it may disappear in a few minutes.

In hysteria, which is most likely to attack young adults, there may be all sorts of nervous symptoms, made worse by expressions of sympathy. If the patient is left alone they quickly disappear, only to begin when somebody approaches.

The treatment of a person in a fit depends on the nature of the attack and its cause. In epilepsy the first thing to do is to pry the mouth open and insert a piece of wood or other solid substance or a rolled-up handkerchief between the teeth to guard the tongue.

The corset, collar and clothing should be loosened. Then the patient should be so placed and guarded as not to be injured during his convulsive movements.

For a child in convulsions immersion to the neck in very warm—not hot—water, together with its application to the head, will quickly restore consciousness.

Hysterical fits are more difficult to treat. Pressure with the thumbs over the bony notches lying under the eyebrows near the nasal ends, will compress the nerve and cause the patient to come out of the fit to scold you for your roughness and rudeness.

Needless to say the underlying trouble must be removed and appropriate treatment directed to the cause of the ailment.

Answers to Health Questions.

E. F. G. Q.—Will you kindly tell me what anemia is, and what is the difference between common anemia and pernicious anemia?

2.—Is it true that marrow of the bones is where the red corpuscles of the blood are produced?

3.—Kindly advise me about ——.

A.—Anemia is deficiency of blood as a whole or deficiency of the number of the red corpuscles or of the hemoglobin. Simple anemia is due to loss of blood, to illness or to a run-down condition. Pernicious anemia is due to a diseased condition which is considered incurable.

2.—Yes, red blood corpuscles are formed in the bone marrow.

3.—Kindly send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for full particulars, and restate your question.

* * *

C. C. Q.—Will you kindly tell me what causes my bones to make a cracking noise?

A.—This is caused by lack of synovial fluid in the joints. Massage the parts with cod liver oil each night before retiring. This will tend to help you.

* * *

MRS. C. C. C. Q.—While lying in bed if I try to practice deep breathing I suffer from severe pains in my left side. Will you kindly tell me what causes this trouble?

A.—Your symptoms may be caused by gas or pelvic inflammation. However, this can only be determined by having an X-ray taken.

* * *

DOT. V.—What will cure enlarged pores?

2.—Is white vaseline good for the eyelashes?

3.—Kindly advise me about ——.

A.—Apply hot and cold compresses alternately, for ten minutes each, daily.

2.—White vaseline is good for the eyelashes, but I would advise a 1 per cent yellow oxide of mercury ointment applied at night upon retiring.

3.—Send self-addressed stamped envelope restating your question and full particulars will be sent you.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medical, hygienic and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Good Night Stories

By Blanche Silver

Illustrated by Neva Harrison

DAVID MEETS LITTLE WILLY CARCAJOU.

DAVID stood a long time, trying to make up his mind just how to pronounce the name he saw upon the wire fence in the zoo.

"Car-ca-jou," he read each letter out very slowly. Then he started when the owner of the queer name came out from behind a bush and looked at him. "Well," laughed David, "I can't pronounce your name but I'm mighty glad to see you, anyway."

"Fine," laughed the queer-looking animal. "Take a good look while you're at it. However, if you can't pronounce the name on the fence, just call me 'Willy Glutton.' That's what my mother used to call me. But when they put me behind these wires, they gave me a fancy name. It sounds like 'Carcajou,' to me. Learned folks in the North used to call my mother a carcajou, but among ourselves we were just plain old gluttons."

"Isn't that funny?" David laughed. "Mama sometimes calls me a little glutton when I eat too much."

"That's just how we came by the name," laughed Willy Glutton. "Why, do you know, we used to follow the trapper, just keeping out of his sight, and eat the bait he put in the traps to catch us. Can you beat that? You see, our fur is very valuable and then, too, we destroy so much when we run wild that folks would like to get rid of us. Now in the West, my relatives are called, 'Skunkbear.'"

"We're Just Plain Gluttons."

"I guess that's because you have some of the same color and do resemble the skunk," laughed David.

Willy Glutton was just about three feet long, rather thick and heavy-set, and covered with long, shaggy hair. His back was a blackish-brown and he was grayish on the upper part of his head and cheeks. His feet were black. When he walked, he put them down flat on the ground.

"I suppose you get the bear part of your name from the way you walk," suggested David. "Mr. Teddy Bear walks just like you do. Where do you live—in the bushes?"

"Goodness, no!" laughed Willy Glutton. "We have a house that Mrs. Glutton dug for us. She generally does that part of the work. She knows what she likes best. But, when we are out in the wild, we almost always live in caves.

"Of course, in the zoo, here we have to dig a hole in the ground. I wish sometime you'd ask the keeper to let you come in and pay us a visit. You're the first little boy I've seen in a long time that could understand me. There, he comes now. I do believe he's bringing us our dinner."

"That just reminds me that Mama told me not to stay long as our dinner was about ready," said David.

When the keeper came up to feed the carcajous, David waved his hand to Willy Glutton and ran home.

Carefully Guard a Transparent Complexion

By LUCREZIA BORI
The Famous Spanish Prima Donna

LUCREZIA BORI

WE have always read in novels about [illegible] transparent skin in which color comes and goes. The woman who possesses such a skin is indeed fortunate, for the beauty of [illegible] ever changing [illegible] to be [illegible] envied and unfortunately too many rosy cheeks are permanent only during the day and are deflated at night when the face is washed or cold creamed before going to bed.

It may whip the quick color into your cheeks, if you happen to be feeling particularly brisk and happy, but at the same time it does another thing which you don't appreciate half so heartily.

It is very likely to put tiny, little wrinkles into the corners of your eyes and about your mouth — for thin transparent skin dries easily and brisk winds are drying in effect.

It seems unfortunate that the same agent which brings color to your cheeks and a sparkle to your eyes could work such havoc with your complexion in other ways. And every woman dreads tiny wrinkles about her eyes, for more often they are a sign of advancing years than of thin, dry, sensitive skin.

But I know a very good remedy for these wrinkles, whatever the source of them. It is likely to be [illegible] your wrinkles [illegible] from years [illegible]

You will find [illegible] delicate skin. Pure soap and soft, warm water are your best friends. Wash your face at night with soap and warm water, rinsing it in cold.

In the morning do not use soap, and if you use warm water first, be sure to follow it up with the cold rinse so the delicate pores of your skin will be closed.

Eat plenty of fruit and vegetables, as well as salads with oil dressings. Get plenty of sleep, for this is an absolute necessity to the thin-skinned woman who would preserve her complexion.

On Your Splendid New Home

For the people of Lincoln, Tuesday, January 1, 1924, means something more than the beginning of a New Year. It marks the opening of a splendid new office building---the new home of one of Lincoln's strongest and best managed banks---as well as the entry of Lincoln's fourth trust company into the field of fiducial service.

Congratulations are, of course, due to the men who have builded the National Bank of Commerce, erected the beautiful structure to house it, and launched the Commerce Trust Company; but congratulations are also due all other financial banking and trust institutions of Lincoln upon this old-new competitor---for keen, clean competition truly "is the life of trade."

And no less are the people of Lincoln and the surrounding territory to be congratulated upon this evidence of the healthy growth of banks and trust companies in the city. For some time Lincoln has been forging ahead as an insurance center, and there is every reason to believe she will gain in prestige as a banking and financial center by reason of the Commerce Bank Building and the institutions it shelters.

Rogers Hornsby Will Not Perform in Giant Uniform

M'GRAW SAYS CARDS ASK TOO MUCH CASH

New York Manager Believes He Has Better All Around Player Than Rogers in Person of Frankie Frisch.

BY HENRY L. FARRELL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Negotiations with the St. Louis Cardinals for Rogers Hornsby have been called off definitely by the New York Giants Hornsby, according to John McGraw, manager of the National league champions, is not worth what the Cards want for him

Frank Frisch, in the opinion of his boss, was a better all around ball player than the league's best batter last season and will far outstep Hornsby in another two years.

Will Not Wreck Club.

McGraw intimated that Hornsby might be a good attraction at the gate but it was not his desire to wreck the club so that the cash register could sing.

After a lot of conversation the St. Louis owners finally said they would listen to a proposition in which Jackson and McQuillan were to be included, but McGraw said he wouldn't consider it.

The 1923 records show that Frisch batted in more runs, got more hits, stole more bases, struck out less and fielded much better than Hornsby while the St. Louis club star had a better batting and slugging average in a less number of games than the young New Yorker.

The Giants believe they have the best second baseman in the league and they do not think well of moving him over to third base even to make room for Hornsby, altho some smart baseball men feel that Frisch is a more natural third baseman. Hornsby might have been used at first base but the Giants are now crowded with three men who can play first just as well as Hornsby altho their batting would not be as strong.

May Buy Jimmy Ring.

McGraw insists that his team is all set outside of the pitching department and that any trades made before the 1924 season starts will be made only for the purpose of adding pitching strength.

There has been a rumor that McGraw was talking with the owners of the Philadelphia club about Jimmy Ring. Last year the deal might have been made but the Phillies hardly will do any selling or trading now that Connie Mack is spending so much money buying players in an attempt to get the Athletics back in the game.

KANSAS AGGIES GETTING READY

Basketball Season Opens January 5, With Game Against Oklahoma Quintet at Manhattan.

MANHATTAN, Kas., Dec. 30.—Coach Corsaut of the Kansas Aggie basketball team has stripped his squad of fourteen players to a team of seven men preparatory to opening the season here with Bennie Owen's Sooners, Saturday January 5.

Only one of the 1923 letter men is sure of his place. He is Perie Rumold, center, who has improved greatly in goal shooting under Coach Corsaut's direction. Rumold has also overcome some bad habits which handicapped his playing last year.

Bunker, Wann, and Tebow are the three forwards whom Coach Corsaut has retained on his first team of seven. Wann made his letter two years ago and is a fast and accurate goal shot. Bunker, however, is the best shot on the team. He and Wann are extremely fast altho rather small. Therefore Corsaut's tentative plan, it is thought, is to alternate Wann and Bunker at one forward position, keeping Tebow at the other.

NO APOLOGY ASKED OF CHARLEY PADDOCK

BOSTON, Dec. 31.—"Charley Paddock has never been asked to apologize to the A. A. U.," William G. Prout, president of the union, said in answer to Paddock's statement that he would apply for reinstatement but that he would not apologize. "His application for reinstatement would be an admission that he was wrong," Prout said.

HANS WAGNER'S LIFE STORY

Copyright, 1923, North American Newspaper Alliance. All Rights Reserved.

CHAPTER 16.—THE TEST OF THE STAR TEAM.

By Hans Wagner.

Having been asked to give an opinion as to what department of baseball comes nearer showing the difference between a star ball club and an ordinary one my answer is: the running and stealing of bases.

There is quite a difference between running bases and stealing bases. It is a different art. Among ball players to run the bases means to get every possible advantage out of a hit. To steal bases means to get every possible advantage on the base paths without a hit.

I notice that fans and even expert writers often make a mistake in referring to a player as a great base runner when they really mean a great base stealer. There are many marvelous base runners who rarely ever steal a base. On the other hand there are some men who seem to have a gift for stealing bases but who often fall down in running out their hits.

To my mind the art of base stealing has declined a whole lot in the last few years, due mostly to the lively ball. Managers, figuring the percentage of chances, seem to have decided that there is less chance in trying for a steal than in waiting for the batter to get a hit. With a lively ball he has more chances of knocking a grounder thru the infield than formerly. That makes the hit and run the outstanding play. If the batter fails to hit, the runner may have the base stolen anyway. If the ball is hit thru the infield, the runner takes an extra base. That is why most smart managers use it ahead of all other plays.

The oddest and most amusing—to the spectators—base running stunt I ever saw happened with the Pirates in a game in Chicago, It was not funny to me.

It was the beginning of the ninth inning and the Cubs had us four to three. Suddenly there came a break. The first man got on Then came a couple of lucky breaks in the infield and we got the bases full with none out. I was next at bat. This looked like a cinch. A hit, a fly ball—anything—wiuld score one run and tie the score. A hit or two would break up the game.

Fall Without A Blow

I never felt surer of winning a ball game in my life. As I stood there I would have bet a thousand to one that we would win.

Kling was catching—and, by the way, there was a great catcher. The whole Chicago infield suddenly went into a conference. Kling went out to the pitcher and after a lot of nodding of heads he came back behind the bat. Taylor was pitching.

I crowded up to the plate but the pitch was far out to one side. They had decided on wasting one.

In a flash Kling, who had figured the situation out right, whipped the ball down to second and the runner who had taken a big lead, was caught flatfooted. Seeing he couldn't get back to second the runner started for third. At the same moment the runner on third started for home.

The Cubs then switched the play and caught the third base runner in a chase between third and home. He finally slid back to third safely and the play shifted again the second base runner being caught going back to second again. This kept up for fully five minutes. Again the man was caught off third By this time every man on both clubs, including substitutes was out on the lines telling the runners what to do. The spectators were also shouting advice I was simply standing there with the bat in my hand

They ran those players up and down the lines for fully ten minutes with everybody confused, the whole game in a jam

Finally they nailed the man at the plate when Kling turned around caught the runner between third and second A ten a long chase they ran him down. Just as he did into second to be touched out the Cubs looked up and there was the other runner leaning down from first to second. In time they got him

All this time the crowd didn't know what was going on Neither did we for that matter All was confusion Finally Umpire O'Day walked up to the plate

"They're all out!" he yelled waving his arms to include the whole diamond

Then for the first time we realized that three men were out

In other words, I walked up to the bat with the bases full and none out On one pitched ball the entire side was put out and I was left standing there. Not a ball had been hit.

I don't believe such a play was ever duplicated in all baseball.

You can well imagine how we sat and looked at each other as we rode back to the hotel.

Get Lead In Stealing

The art of base stealing and base running does not necessarily rely on speed. The main thing in stealing a base is to get the lead. Without a lead a runner is merely wasting his time, no matter how fast he is The important thing is to study the pitcher closely and find out just what kind of a move he makes in throwing to first base and the plate. Nearly every one of them has some little mannerism that is noticeable to a close student.

Louis Drucke, of the Giants, had a fault of lifting his right heel off the ground just before he turned to throw to first. If he didn't do that we knew he would throw to the plate. That gave us a chance to take a lead. Drucke had great luck in beating our club in the old days notwithstanding this weakness. It took McGraw a long time to discover how we knew when to take a lead but he finally got it. Then he made Drucke change his habits. That is an illustration of how close a young pitcher has to be watched.

Fans often think a pitcher is wonderful, but they do not know of these little faults. Until they are corrected the pitcher is not properly seasoned for fine work.

After a runner thinks he has outguessed the pitcher he gets his lead and starts. Mind you, a base runner knows that the pitcher is also studying him to see what move he makes for a bluff or a real start. Therefore the runner must watch himself, as well as the pitcher. He must stand exactly the same when he intends to bluff or to start. He must never tip his mitt.

Once a man starts he must go thru. That thing of trying to get back to the base if caught, is foolish. There is more chance in going thru with it. No man can be a good base runner without a good hook slide, and he must be able to slide either to the right or left. The direction in which to slide can nearly always be determined by the motion of the infielder who starts to cover the bag.

Go Thru With It

Let me advise a young ball player: if you start a slide go on thru with it whether you are caught or not. If you attempt to check your slide you are likely to break a leg. Don't forget that the pitcher is as worried as you are. The main idea is to make him do the worrying.

Ty Cobb has the right theory in baserunning. He always took the chances and tested the other fellow's nerve instead of letting the opposition test his. There is a lot in that. Make them do the worrying This is true in any business. Instead of letting the other man keep you worried as to what he is going to do you should take the offensive and make the defense worry as to what you are going to do.

Cobb, for instance, has never worried about being cut out by the baseman's spikes. But they were always worried about being cut by his. There is just as much danger one way as the other, but his aggressive and determined manner made them feel on the defensive always. I don't believe that Cobb or any other good base runner ever deliberately cut into a baseman. No ball player wants to hurt another. The good ones, though, always want to win. That is all they think of.

Tomorrow—The Plays That Take Baseball Genius

FARRELL SAYS BILL TILDEN WILL PLAY

Differences Arising From the Last Davis Cup Matches Will Not Stop Champion in Olympic Competition.

BY HENRY L. FARRELL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Bill Tilden will play with the American Olympic tennis team if he is selected by the committee of the United States lawn tennis association.

Tilden will be selected as a member of the team and he will be the first and ranking player on the list.

When it was announced that the Davis cup committee of the association had been appointed to name the ten men and women tennis stars to be sent to Paris next summer, trouble was scented.

Tilden and the Davis cup committee are not getting on well together at the present time, because of some personal differences that arose during the doubles contest of the last cup matches at Forest Hills.

Harold H. Hackett, former Davis cup star and one of the best doubles players in the game, tried to tell Tilden how he should play after the third set had been completed

Tilden resented both the manner in which Hackett gave his orders and the time at which he saw fit to criticize the champion's game.

Both voiced their opinions publicly and Tilden said he was thru with international competition, if the Davis cup committee did not alter its policy of handling the players.

Tilden is somewhat of a prima donna, but it is certain that he will not allow any personal differences with the directors of the game to handicap the American Olympic team.

For the same reason, the committee named to select the players cannot refuse to give Tilden a place on the team because he is a radical.

Tildn will be appointed and, if the committee is fair minded, he should be named captain of the team.

When he is selected, Tilden will accept the appointment and will play.

Considering that Hackett was a great doubles player and qualified to criticize another player's game and that he also had a position of responsibility and the moral right to express his opinions, it would seem that he did not make a mistake when he took it upon himself to tell Tilden that he was not playing correctly in the doubles match with the Australians.

Hackett, however, may have made a mistake in the tone of his voice and he may have been indiscreet in selecting a very delicate time to censure any player, especially a temperamental star like Tilden

Judgment always must be exercised in criticism, as can be illustrated by the following incident:

The owner of a major league club, who was a great believer in the value of military discipline, was talking to a manager of a club in another league, who has always had great success in handling all kinds of ball players.

They were discussing what the manager of this owner's club should have done when one of his player's gave a public exhibition of insubordination by taking a swing at his manager when he was corrected for a mistake in judgment on the field.

The owner maintained that the manager should have suspended him and fined him a month's pay or fired him clear off the club

"You're both wrong," the manager said "The idea is to prevent such things from happening and then such disciplinary measures would not be necessary. I have found that it is always a mistake to criticize a ball player until he has had time to cool off.

In most cases a player is sore at himself for making a mistake he is humiliated by a public bawling out and he is so worked up that he will try to take it out on the first person handy. I never haul out a player until he has had time to think it over and then in nine cases out of ten, he will agree with you If he is the right kind of a player no criticism is necessary after he has had time to give it a good thought."

In any case especially where the athlete is capable of thinking himself, it is far better to suggest than to command.

BEGINNER, 62, MAKES HIS SECOND HOLE-IN-ONE SHOT

DES MOINES, Ia., Dec. 30.—A hole-in-one ceased to be a novelty to F. M. Green, sixty-two, a public links golfer here, when he sunk his drive for the second time this season. Green scored yesterday's ace on the first hole at Waveland Park On November 25 he holed out in one on the sixth hole. Both holes measure about one hundred and sixty yards He took up golf last summer.

YEAR'S BEST FIGHT KNOCKOUT OF FIRPO

Year of 1923 Takes Rank as Most Spectacular, if Not the Greatest Ever Witnessed, in Pugilism.

NEW YORK, Dec. 30.—Establishing a record for championship activity, the pugilistic season of 1923 has taken rank as the most sepectacular, if not the greatest ever witnessed.

Nine battles with world's championships at stake, in five of which titles changed hands, were fought during the year, the climax coming sensationally when Jack Dempsey successfully defended his heavyweight crown by knocking out Luis Firpo, Argentine challenger, in the second round at the Polo grounds.

That savage, furious struggle between the American "Tiger Man" and the "Wild Bull of the Pampas" lasted less than four minutes but, in the minds of those who saw it, ranks as the most reamkable battle of all time, an epic that has no parellel in ring history Knocked down seven times in the first round, Firpo came back with a battering rush that drove Dempsey thru the ropes and all but toppled the American from his throne, but the champion crushed his opponent in the second round, the final count coming on the South American's ninth kockdown.

With the exception of Joe Lynch, bantamweight king, and Mickey Walker, welterweight titleholder, all of the world's champions risked their titles in important matches and the end of the season found four new fistic rulers at the top. They are Pancho Villa, Filipino whirlwind, who knocked Jimmy Wilde, little Britisher, from the flyweight; Johnny Dundee, New York Italian, who battered Eugene Criqui, French war veteran, into defeat two months after the latter had knocked out Johnny Kilbane for the featherweight secptre; Harry Greb, Pittsburgh "windmill," who deprived Johnny Wilson, of Boston, of middleweight laurels; and Mike McTigue, Irish-American, who won the light heavyweight crown by outpointing Battling Siki, the singular Senegalese, on St. Patrick's day in Dublin.

Dempsey and Benny Leonard, lightweight king, remained masters of their classes. Besides battling Firpo, the heavyweight titleholder defended his corwn against Tommy Gibbons, of St. Paul, in the little Montana boom town of Shelby on the Fourth of July, failing to score a knockout but winning decisively on points in fifteen rounds. Leonard met his foremost rival, Lew Tendler, once more and scored a decisive victory in a fifteen-round match at the Yankee stadium.

Two American ring titles also changed hands but in both cases the losers acquired other laurels before the season closed. Villa lost the American flyweight title to Frankie Genaro of New York, before conquering Wilde, and Greb was shorn of his American light heavyweight title by Gene Tunney, former soldier boxer and Greenwich village idol, before defeating Wilson. Tunney whipped Greb in defense of his 175-pound honors recently at Madison Square garden, and apparently settled their rivalry of two years' standing.

LITTLE LESSONS IN Basketball

Is it good basketball to use "English" on the ball in shooting short baskets, especially from the side or underneath the basket?

Answered by

DANNY M'NICHOL.

Former University of Pennsylvania captain and captain of the all-American basketball team Characterized by many sporting writers as "the greatest basketball player of all time."

Do not intentionally use English on the ball when shooting, no matter from what position. Using this English, or spin, necessitates that the ball hit one particular small spot if it is to drop thru the ring successfully. Of course, there will always be some spin to the ball but let this be incidental rather than designed.

RED GRANGE IS BIG SENSATION OF GRID

Illinois Back Causes More Discussion Than Any Other Player of 1923 Season—He Beat Nebraska.

Detroit News: Unquestionably the most talked about player of the year in football circles is "Red" Grange of the University of Illinois

Grange, largely thru sheer speed, has run circles around every team that Illinois played during the past season True, splendid interference has aided greatly in many of his sensational runs, but, once free, there was no catching Grange. He is a ten-second speed merchant.

Grange, in his first year of Western college football, is almost the unanimous choice of the experts for all-America honors.

Ties Michigan in Big Ten.

His ability to wiggle loose for long runs many of them resulting in touchdowns, was largely responsible for Illinois sharing big ten honors with Michigan.

During the season just closed Grange scored one or more touchdowns in every game played, totaling twelve for the year. In aggregate he gained 1,260 yards in seven games.

Against the Nebraska team, that gained much fame by defeating Notre Dame, Grange made three touchdowns, the margin by which Illinois won the game, the score being 24 to 7.

Turns the Tide to Victory.

When Butler, with Grange on the sidelines, was making the going a bit too strenuous for Illinois, Coach Zuppke rushed his star into the breach and in a very short time Grange had scored two touchdowns. Illinois won by just that margin, the score being 21 to 7.

Against Northwestern, Grange ran wild for only nineteen minutes, three touchdowns resulting. Northwestern was beaten 29 to 0. In all probability, had Grange remained in the game the score would have been twice that large.

Scores One in Chicago Game.

Iowa versus Illinois was a real battle; Illinois just managed to win, 9 to 6. Grange scored only one touchdown in this game, but it made victory possible. On a pass from Hall in the final minutes of play, with Iowa leading 6 to 3, Grange came thru.

Chicago, with a fine line and a great backfield, figured to stop Grange At times the Maroons checked him considerably, but he came thru with a touchdown that enabled Illinois to win, 7 to 0.

Is the Big Ten Sensation.

By this time Grange was the sensation of Western conference football and much talked about in other sections Tough games loomed ahead with Wisconsin and Ohio State Each team was coached to watch Grange stop him.

Illinois defeated Wisconsin 10 to 0, a touchdown by Grange made it secure Would Ohio State, in the final game of the year, bottle up Zuppke's speed marvel?

For three periods Ohio State kept Grange from getting loose. Illinois broke the scoreless tie with a field goal. The margin of three points had Coach Zuppke nervously pacing the side lines. But the irrepressible Mr. Grange was not to be denied. He kept up his remarkable scoring record by going over the Ohio State line for a touchdown. The score was 9 to 0, Illinois.

LEWIS AND JAP JU JITSU ARTIST MEET

CHICAGO, Dec. 31. — Ed "Strangler" Lewis, heavyweight mat champion, and Tart Myaki, Japanese ju jitsu expert meet in a finish match here tomorrow afternoon.

Adam Krieger Wins Two Straight Falls

Adam Krieger returned Monday morning from Clarinda, Ia., where he won in straight falls Saturday night from Roy Chick, formerly of Lincoln, in a finish wrestling match. Krieger used a head scissors and double wristlock to gain the first fall which came in 47 minutes and a body scissors and headlock for the second which came four minutes after the two grapplers had resumed.

Krieger appears here January 11 against Fritz Hansen, North Carolina, and on January 15 he goes to Maryville, Mo., to wrestle for a purse of $1,000 against Irvan Brackman, a Maryville wrestler.

HE DID NOT BOOST GAS

Standard have patched up their differences and there is no competition. This increase in rates that the attorneys general and the federal officers have a cause of action under the Junkin act and laws against restraint of trade.

"If the price does not go above 15 1-4 I do not feel it will be necessary or advisable to establish sales agencies, but if the prices goes beyond that I will feel it my duty to protect Nebraska consumers with such means as I can find.

"The reduction from 22 to 15 1-4 cents has made a saving of $10,000,000 a year in Nebraska and leaves a living profit if the state and federal governments fail to function properly, neither the public nor the gasoline industry will be permitted to impose upon each other. During my term as governor I propose to see that the state government functions."

FIND NO CLUE OF DIXMUDE

STORMS DESTROYING DIRIGIBLE OBSCURED TRACES.

Official Inquiry Begun Into Causes Which Led to Destruction of Huge Liner of the Air.

PARIS, Dec. 31.—The elements which destroyed the dirigible Dixmude conspired today to obscure her fate.

Unprecedented storms swept southern France and roared over the Mediterranean, cutting land communications as well as interrupting wireless and preventing news of the search for the airship and her gallant crew from reaching the capital.

Official inquiry was begun into the causes that led to the Dixmude's destruction in the storm the night of December 21-22, when, it now appears, the giant liner was struck by a lightning bolt and hurled flaming into the white capped sea, where all her officers and men perished.

charging more or less at one place than they charge in another place."

"Gasoline has gone up only to the point to which it was reduced at the time I called on the Standard Oil company for a reduction," said Governor Bryan. "The price was reduced from 22 cents to 16 1-4 cents."

He then proceeded to relate how he started an investigation and after finding the spread between wholesale and retail to be 11 and 12 cents a gallon he demanded that the retail price be reduced to something reasonable or it would be necessary for the state to go into competition, that he had told the Standard he had ordered gasoline and its answer might determine whether he woul put it on sale.

"That night the price was reduced by the Standard company in accordance with my suggestion," said Governor Bryan. Since then the Standard and independents began to undermine each other on prices and on supplies ordered by big customers. The independents cut below 16 1-4 and the Standard retaliated, and there has been price cutting all around. The action in restoring the price to the original cut rate indicates that the independents and the h. p. capacity each. Three smaller ones from the old plant will be sold.

Commissioner Schroeder also presented a resolution asking for bids on a boiler feed water pump with capacity of 150 gallons a minute. Mr. Erickson's cost estimate is $1,800.

WASHINGTON INVESTIGATES

Also Sends Extra Help to Omaha to Pass Upon State Vouchers for Road Construction.

State Auditor Marsh was the first state officer to go on record as trying to get the federal road bureau to hasten the payment of claims for road building in Nebraska. He wrote the department of agriculture under date of December 19 asking about the delay in payment of Nebraska road vouchers.

In reply Secretary Henry Wallace has written under date of December 27: "This matter has been referred to the bureau of public roads with directions to make complete investigation of the whole matter. It is proposed to send some one from the Washington office both to Omaha and Lincoln in the hope that this matter may be straightened out to your satisfaction."

Deputy Secretary Cochran of the Nebraska highway department is now sending vouchers for road work direct to the federal district engineer at Omaha so that the federal engineer at Lincoln may catch up with his work. Four assistants have been added to the federal force at the Omaha office.

SAY SALE NOT JUSTIFIED

Heirs of Tom Draper Ask Supreme Court to Hold Executore Without Power to Sell.

The attorney for James Draper and other heirs of Thomas W. Draper has filed with the supreme court a brief in support of his claim that the executors of the Draper estate had no power to sell the block at Twelfth and P streets to Frank D. Eager, and they especially charge that it was sold to him for $52,000 when it is actually worth $85,000. They lost in district court.

The will of Mr. Draper, who was a former member of the city council provided that the executors should have power to sell any of his real estate to carry out the provisions of the will, and his heirs now contend that this is a limitation of their powers. The will also provided for trustees who should serve till a daughter Alice became fifty.

It is contended that as all of the expenses of the administration and all debts were paid, there was no reason at all for selling the block. It was yielding $5,200 a year in rents and this was ample to provide an income for the heirs, pay the interest on the $17,000 mortgage and make necessary repairs and pay taxes. After Mr. Eager got it he raised rents so as to get $6,700 a year, and they say that as he did this without making any extraordinary repairs, it was plain that no emergency existed that justified the sale to him.

They further point out that Mr. Eager secured it on such terms that he can pay for it out of the rentals, and that while this is a good thing for him, it was not a wise thing for the executors. He paid $1,000 down, $4,000 a few months later, and $3,000 a year for ten years, besides assuming incumbrances.

PORTER GETS A JUDGMENT

Pullman Conductor Called Him a Thief and Jury Said It Was Slandering Him.

The Pullman company has filed with the supreme court an appeal from a verdict of a jury in Douglas count that it, joined with Fred E. Gilliland, owed Jesse J. Armstrong $1,750.

Armstrong is a porter employed by the Union Pacific in charge of a chair car on a train running between Omaha and Cheyenne. His story was that one day when he was about his duties Gilliland, who is a Pullman conductor, came into his car and in the presence of passengers accused him of stealing gloves and cigarets from some one in Gilliland's car, and not only called him a thief but took hold of him and shook him and searched him. He says this caused him great humiliation, and not being true it damaged him in the estimation of his fellow citizens. He asked for $10,000.

The Pullman company claimed it was not liable because what Gilliland did was not in the scope of his apparent authority, but the lower court held it equally responsible. Gilliland also appealed.

RIVER TOOK PART OF LAND

One Reason Why John Eggli, Nance County Farmer, Objects to Paying for It.

John Eggli has requested the aid of the supreme court in relieving himself of the necessity of paying a judgment obtained against him, in Nance county, of $2,447. Eggli purchased 365 acres of land from Joe Shotkoski for $200 an acre several years ago, making a total of $71,800, of which $28,000 was paid in cash and mortgages assumed for the reminder. A note for $2,105 figured in the payment. Sued on this note Eggli makes the defense that when he came to measure his land he found that thirty-four acres of it had been chewed up and washed away by the Loup river. He asked for $6,800 as a counterclaim for the value of the land he did not get.

When it developed on the trial that this was a renewal of an original note and that never before had he made any claim in the shortage of acreage, the court directed a verdict for Shotkoski, who says Eggli knew at all times what acreage he was buying.

PART RELIEF FROM STORM

Moines shivered on the last day of the old year today and indications pointed to considerable snow before nightfall. A strong northwest wind broke yesterday afternoon and increased in intensity during the night. Several inches of snow accompanied the cold wave. Icy streets and snow flurries caused twenty-two minor auto accidents over the week-end.

CHADRON, Neb., Dec. 31.—Northwest Nebraska experienced its first severe cold snap Sunday, following a snow storm which commenced Saturday night and continued thruout the following day. The temperature dropped steadily all day Sunday and is reported to have reached 18 degrees below zero early Monday morning. The fall of snow was light in Chadron.

FALLS CITY, Neb., Dec. 31.—1923 made its farewell bow to Falls City today with the coldest weather of the season, the temperature dropping to one above this morning. Two inches of snow fell during the night. Indications today were that New Years will be much warmer.

FREMONT WOMAN SUICIDE

Lula Parsons, Thirty-five. Found by Aged Father Dangling From Rafter of Garage.

FREMONT, Neb., Dec. 31.—As Ira Parsons, seventy-two, retired farmer, entered his garage at 10:30 this morning to get his crutches preparatory to going in search of his daughter, Lula Parsons, thirty-five, he found the body of the woman dangling upon a heavy rope from the rafter, the legs resting against a chair from which she had evidently leaped when committing suicide. The body was fully clothed.

The only reason that can be attributed for the death is despondency due to ill health. She had not complained since last summer. At that time, however, she underwent a serious operation and once told her mother that "she had a notion to jump into the Platte river."

Last night she informed her father that she intended to visit friends at the Mrs. B. C. Allen home in this city. Preparatory to doing this she attired herself in her best clothes. Coming from the bedroom to the living room after dressing, she informed her parent that she might be away all night.

"If you don't see me tonight don't think hard of it, father," she told him.

When he awakened this morning he found that she had not been home. He then decided to go in search of her.

BANDITS KIDNAP WOMAN

Chinese Outlaws Seize Mrs. Euthern, Whose Brother Is Missionary at Tsao Yang.

PEKING, Dec. 31.—Chinese bandits, capturing the city of Tsao Yang, in the provine eof Supeh today, kidnaped Mrs. Julian Kilen Euthern, whose brother is a missionary and seriously wounded Bernard Hoft and the latter's wife, who are attached to the same mission.

Th egovernor of Hsiao Yao Nan previously had warned the missionaries that bandits were about. The missionaries embarked on junks and barges on the Yank Tsze Kiang river, remained several days and then returned to the mission on advice from the governor that the bandits had been suppressed.

The American legation has protested in the strongest terms.

FIREMEN MAKE THREE RUNS.

An oil furance overflowing caused a fire at a residence at 2812 Everett Monday forenoon. A stairway was nearly destroyed and the ceiling of the basement was badly scorched, according to Chief Hanson. The flaming oil ran into the cold air pipes and caused the firemen some trouble. The house is occupied by George Warren and C. W. Wonch. The building is own by William Sutton and Judge H. G. Whitmore.

An electric light pole at Sixth and J caught fire from some hot ashes which had been thrown against it. Firemen made a run there at 10:30 a. m.

A fire in an auto owned by F. Van Kleeck, 3021 T, was caused by the carburetor overflowing. No damage resulted. The car was parked at Twenty seventh and Q. Firemen went there at 12:48 p. m.

The Burgess-Nash Company Adopts Profit-Sharing Plan

Beginning January 2d we will sell to our employees, customers and friends a limited number of Profit-Sharing Preferred Shares in the Burgess-Nash Company. The shares will pay from 7 to 10 per cent. They will be sold for cash or on partial payments.

This is the first time the American public has ever been given an opportunity to share, to this extent, in the profits of a big and growing department store. This offer is for a limited time only.

New Policy for a Department Store

By issuing these Profit-Sharing Preferred Shares, the Burgess-Nash Company is adopting a new policy for an American department store.

This policy is the modern method of ownership and management for successful business institutions.

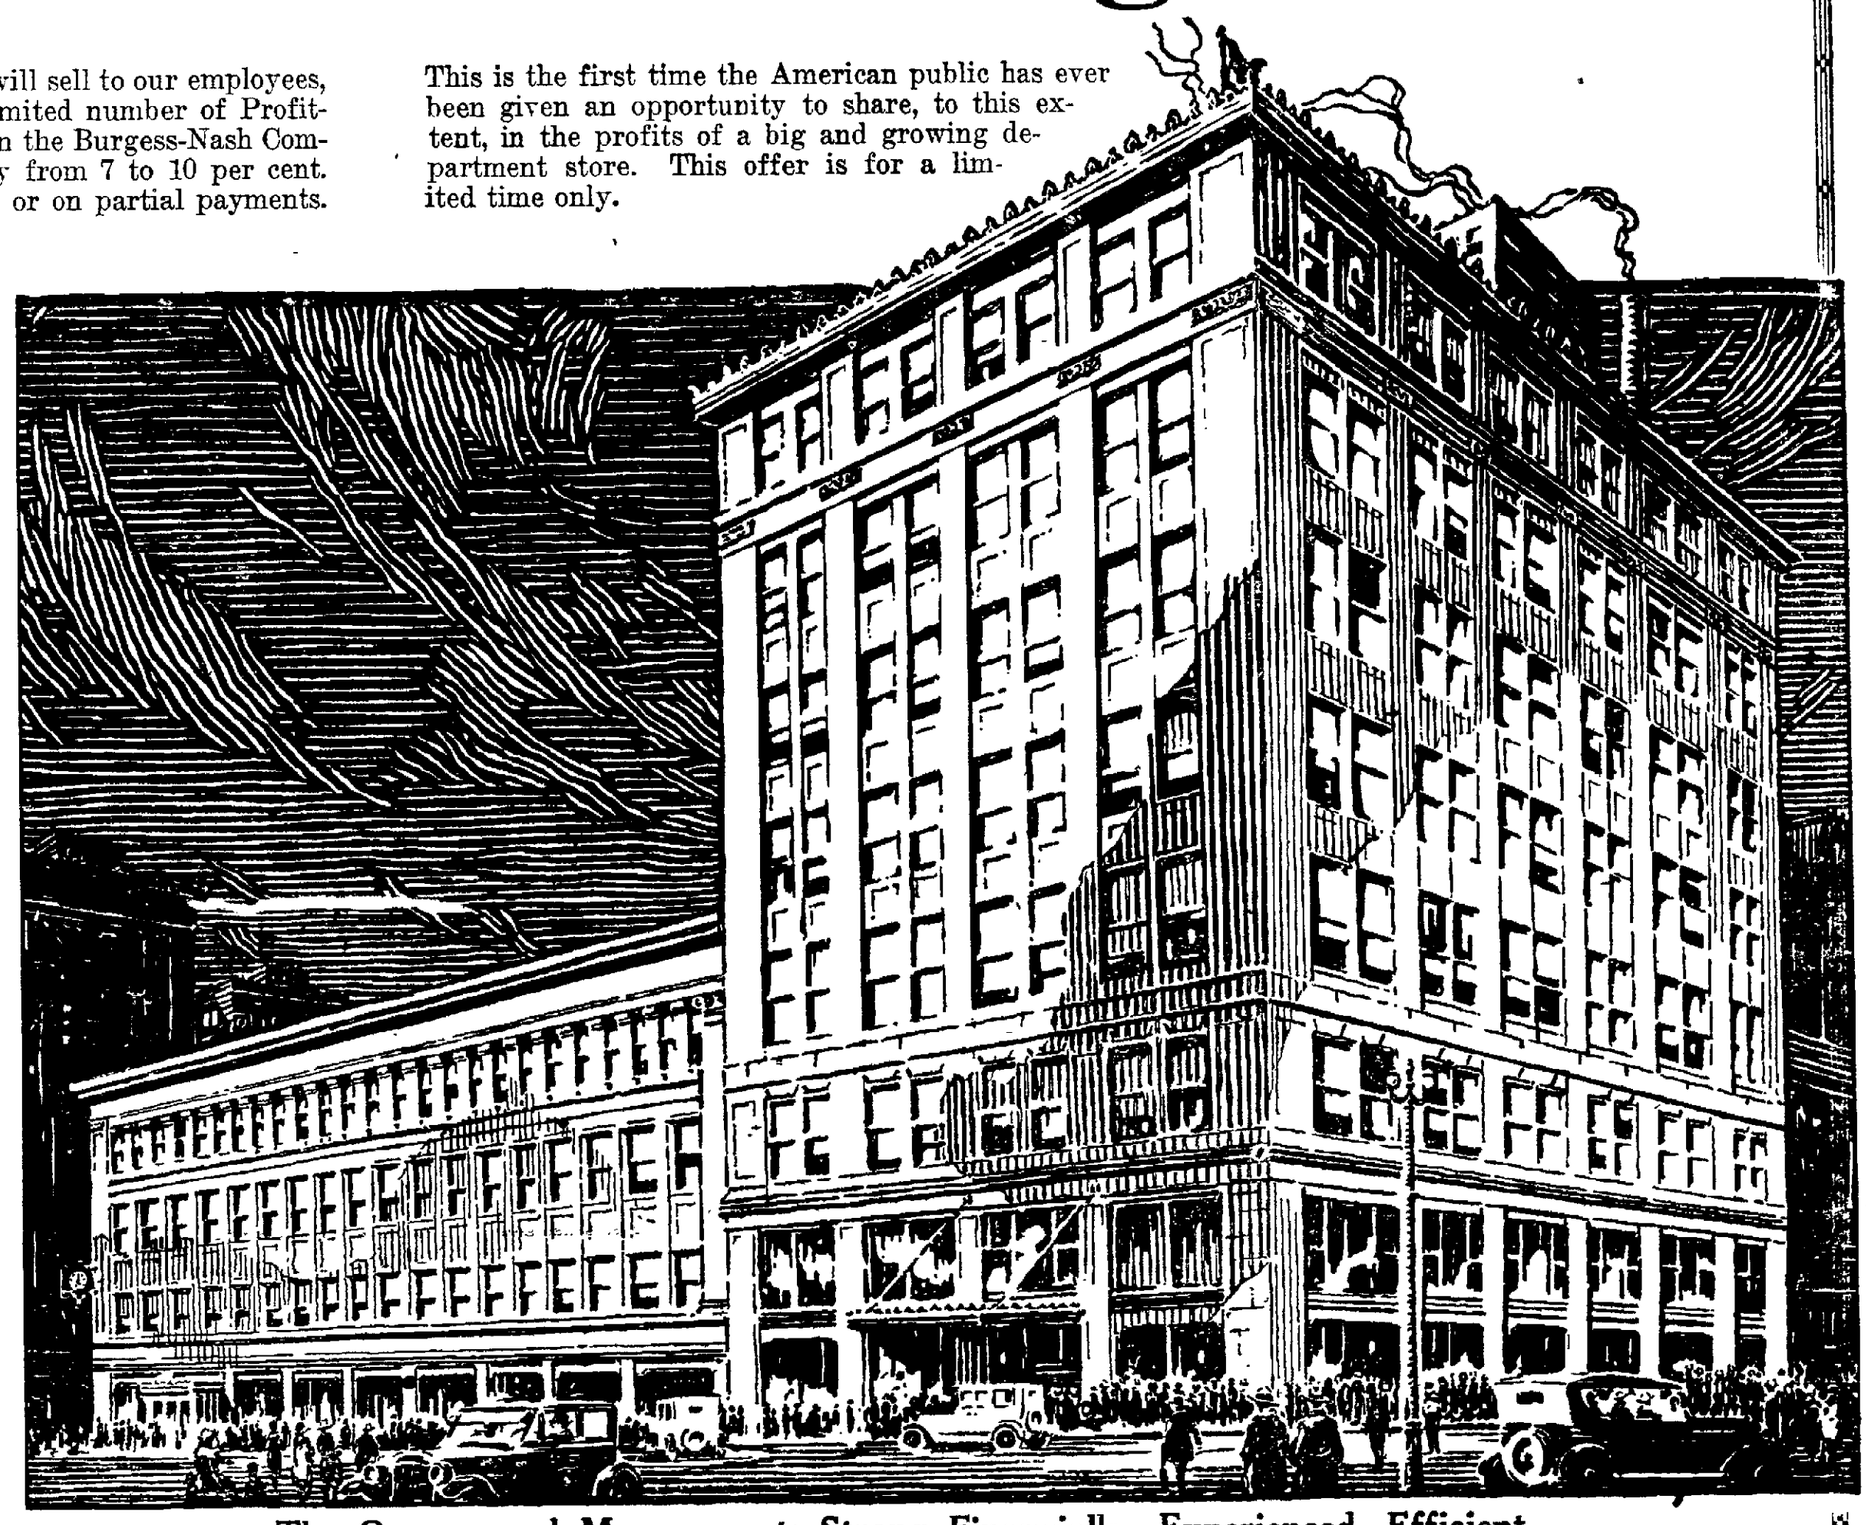

The modern method of financing successful businesses is to permit customers and employes to become part owners and to share in the profits.

Modern business experience has proven that a business with profit sharing employes and customers is invariably the most successful business. That is the reason we are adopting this new financial plan.

We believe our rapidly growing store will become even larger and will grow faster when a large number of our customers become part owners of the Burgess-Nash store.

These shares we will offer on January 2d, which will pay from 7 to 10 per cent, are preferred and cumulative. The shares are of the highest character as a security—a conservative, safe investment. Strong financial houses have asked permission to underwrite them, but we know it will be better for our business to have them owned by our employes, customers and friends.

This new ownership policy will be beneficial to us. The excellent dividends which the shares will pay will make it beneficial to owners of the shares.

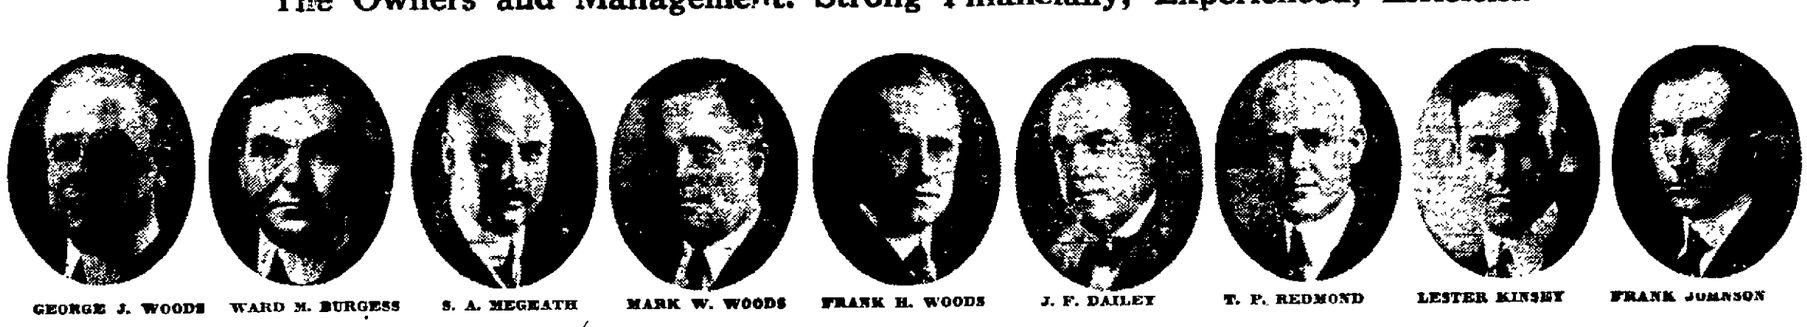

The Philadelphia Retail Ledger said:

"The Burgess-Nash department store of Omaha is now making what is believed to be one of the most significant records in the history of the mercantile world—a record that is worthy of the most careful study and consideration on the part of every merchandise man in the United States.

"The store is advancing by leaps and bounds.

"These sale increases are not accidental, nor caused by any exceptional financial situation of Omaha and her trade territory but by progressive merchandising principles which have been put into operation.

The Owners and Management: Strong Financially, Experienced, Efficient.

These shares will be sold by employees of Burgess-Nash Company and M. E. Smith & Company.

Never Missed a Dividend

The Burgess-Nash Company has never failed to pay regular dividends on any of its securities in all of its long history.

Furthermore, we are selling these shares to our customers and other local people. The success of our business depends upon them and we could not afford to sell them anything in which we did not have the utmost confidence.

These Profit-Sharing Preferred Shares will pay 7 per cent to the owner and, in addition, after the common shares receive 7 per cent, the Profit-Sharing Preferred Shares will continue to share in the profits up to a total of 10 per cent.

LATEST MARKETS

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Grains started strong and higher on the board of trade here today.

A sharp upturn in Liverpool reflected in initial wheat trading here and prices went up fractionally. Buying was also induced by visitation of a cold wave over the southwest, where many fields lack snow covering. Receipts, 30 cars.

December led corn in the initial upturn despite deliveries of 945,000 bushels. A considerable load of these deliveries were thrown on the market later and a moderate recession occurred.

Oats held its opening gain despite weakness in other grains, this being attributed to more speculative interest and light receipts totaling 100 cars.

Most of the earl ytrade in provisions was confined to ladl on a slightly higher basis.

Advance Crude Oil.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Stand Oil Ind advanced all grade of North Louisiana and Ark Crude 15 cents a barrel.—Lamson.

J. H. Ware, jr.: Steel equipments Oil coppers and sugars may all be bought with the prospects of higher prices in January.

Broadan Wall: A more higher and broader market is looked for in rails. There is a strong technical point in selling some industrials for profits and buy transportation shares.

Confidence in the futnure of the oil industry is growing.

Hornblower & Weeks: We look for another strong market today with special strength and activity in low-priced sharse.

G. B. Post: Strong support comes over Sunday in cheerful frame of mind. Looks especially for higher prices in stocks like United States steel; Un-Pac and Industrial Alcohol. Believes that pools will be inclined to window dress their favorite stocks over the end of the year.—Lamson.

Grain Market Opinions.

J. M. Simpson: See nothing in the situation at the moment to change my views regarding a rtading position. Think purchases on the setbacks as the market no doubt will receive support from sold out longs.

Logan & Bryan: The trade would welcome a good bull market.

Thomson McKinnon: The market presents good opportunities for investment buying on the dips.

Bartlett Frazier & Co.: We see nothing to suggest permanency of gains.

Clement Curtis & Co.: Higher prices are promised for the future.

Hulburd Warren & Chandler: De doubt any scarcity of wheat. Corn and oats should work sigher.—Lamson.

Journal of Commerce Report.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Recognition of the worth of the grain exchange and the service they can perform if allowed to function without side interference will eventually be brought about it is believed. It is beginning to down on government officials that formerly gave audience to the most impossible schemes while they refused a hearing to organized grain trade representatives.

Herald-Examiner Report.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—The wheat trade hasapparently reached a point where all bearish conditions have been discounted. Influential interests seem to be willing to buy on breaks from these levels.

The future course of corn prices is dependent largely upon how much corn farmers sell. If the movement becomes heavy, lower prices are likely, otherwise an advance is expected.

There has been heavy covering by shorts of late. A few operators who have been bearish have turned to the long side.

Oats are receiving more attention from the trade.—Lamson.

Chicago Tribune Report.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—Over-production and restricted speculation have been responsible for low wheat prices. There has been support, however, which has held prices above a world parity. This has crippled the export outlet.—Lamson.

Stein Alstrin: We advise purchases of good stocks on any reaction.

Harris Winthrop & Co.: Indications point to more activity headed by Steel.

Logan & Bryan: Action of market warrants expectation of upward trend for a while longer.

Thomson McKinnon: Recommend purchase of stocks on all reactions.—Lamson.

Wall Street Journal Review.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Cash transactions in large volume were the principal feature of the early dealings in the stock market. These sales represented the belated establishment of losses against 1923 taxes and the fact that the market was generally strong in the face of this liquidation demonstrated its splendid absorptive powers.

The business news over the week-end was constructive with further advances in crude oil prices attractive the most attention.

These upward revisions brought a fresh demand for the oils, which displayed group buoyancy in the early trading.

Harold Bell Wright's Dream.

A. J. R. in Minneapolis Journal: Harold Bell Wright is said to be a persistent searcher for the "Lost Mines of Arizona," in the fabled "Canyon of Gold," which contains a spring of water on the sandy bottom of which you can see gold nuggets. Such is the persistent legend.

Mr. Wright has spent days at a time in the hills among which he has his home, talking to the Indians and following faint trails in the hope of stumbling upon the "Canyon of Gold." He writes his friends that the Indians know the location but "they guard the secret with all the cunning they possess."

In 1859, following predatory Indians, Sergeant Crossthwaite, accompanied by Privates Joe Wormley and Eugene Flannican, lost themselves in the hills. Two of their horses dropped from exhaustion and their provisions ran out.

They struck out in a northerly direction, seeking water in what is supposed to have been the Granite Wash range of mountains in northern Yuma county. They found a spring just in time to save their lives. They camped and in the morning found in it some gold nuggets.

Above the spring were two quartz veins, one narrow and the other sixteen feet wide, out of which the troopers dug coarse gold with their knives. About fifty pounds of this golden quartz they loaded on the remaining horse and set out for the Gila river.

Crossthwaite succumbed, but the other two, who barely survived, had the stuff assayed and it went $1,800 to the ton. They made unsuccessful attempts to return to the site of the spring, but were never able to do so. Hostile Indians, and one thing or another, always baffled them.

They are dead now, but they had a fine story to relate, during the latter part of their lives. That in itself is sometimes worth more than gold.

John B. Nichals of Chickasha, Oklahoma, did something that you and I would not do. After having sunk all his money, about $50,000 in prospective "oil fields," where the "trend" of the older oil fields was supposed to be, but in which no oil had been found, he gambled his diamonds. They were sold and the drill started again. This time millions of feet of natural gas burst out of the hole with a frightful roar.

Today the production from the Chickasha fields is more than one and three-quarters of a billion cubic feet a day. Lines are being laid, a building boom is on and the gas will be sold manufacturers, who are coming in rapidly, at prices that look like German marks when compared to average costs. Experts say the Chickasha fields will last "indefinitely." This is a long time.

Mr. Nichals did well to bet his diamonds. We would not have done that, after dropping the $50,000. Evidently he is one of that variety of men who keep the old man Martin on the dead run.

Then there is that little devil who was a soda fountain clerk in a drug store at Wichita, Kansas. I speak disrespectfully of him thru envy,—sheer envy. His name is Henry B. Rogers and he has the fine soda-fountain-clerk-head of luxuriant, curly hair, which I also envy, and about a billion dollars in the savings bank. I may exaggerate this sum a trifle, for the sake of the story, but it is far more than enough. I have his picture on the desk. He is but twenty-eight years old.

In 1914 Mr. Rogers left Wichita practically penniless. He made a little sum in lease transactions in Oklahoma and put it all into the "textile industry" in Texas. What this textile industry is, I do not know, but Mr. Rogers is called in Texas a "captain of industry," and as he is rated "several times a millionaire," it must be something useful. Altho he never attended a college or high school, he is traveling around the world today with his wife—and probably does not know what he ought to visit—unless the guidebooks tell him.

I am always running thru the southwestern exchanges for these stories. Since the gas wells began to blossom down there, such stories are not uncommon. If Harold Bell Wright finds the fabled "Canyon of Gold," the incident should also prove interesting. Tho I believe Mr. Wright does not want for money. Whenever he writes a novel, about a million persons purchase it under the impression that they are getting great American literature. Perhaps they are, but in any event, Mr. Wright is getting a great roll of that, the love of which is said to be the root of all evil. Why should he hunt for the "Lost Mines of Arizona"? Probably for the excitement of it.

Meantime the rest of us sit around the stove wondering how in thunder we are going to get the money to pay our taxes next month. Something wrong with us, Bo, something wrong with us!

And that is not our grandfathers' fault either.

The Scene Is Set.

A. J. R. in Minneapolis Journal: "Mrs. John Drummond was toiling in a needle-work factory at Haverstraw, N. Y., earning just enough to keep herself in a small, furnished room."

That is the form used by a certain variety of "human interest stories" to set the scene. Some of us view these stories with suspicion. But I feel an inclination to "fall for them"—especially at the holiday season. It makes one more at peace with the universe to find that things often turn out pleasantly.

But how does one know that this story is to turn out pleasantly? Why, it is instinct. You cannot read the opening sentence without knowing that the worst is past and that the future is dawning rosily for Mrs. John Drummond.

"Mrs. John Drummond was toiling in a needle-work factory at Haverstraw, N. Y., earning just enough to keep herself in a small furnished room."

The scene is set.

As the reader goes on with the story, he finds Mrs. John Drummond going home from her needlework job after a hard day at the factory shortly before the Merrie Christmas blew up on us and set afire the white, inflammable whiskers of dozens and dozens of Main street Santa Clauses.

The lady was, of course, tired and despondent. There was no fire in the room and precious little to eat, tho it might have been "enough." Yet to scurry around, light the fire and throw together a little lonesome meal was, for Mrs. John Drummond, nothing in the way of indoor sport. Her sigh, perhaps naturally sounded like the exhaust of a Minneapolis & St. Louis railroad locomotive when the Kenwood district is endeavoring to obtain a little repose.

Perhaps you are asking at this point where John Drummond was? That is what I asked as I read. The sordid fact is that, twenty years ago, John, peeved, stepped on the family gas. In other words, he disappeared. About the year 1903, I would freely give a thousand dollars to see it doing business again on the calendar. John hopped the nest. He deserted the lady.

She looked about her for a while, perhaps wept a few, perhaps congratulated herself that she was free of the pup at last. But at any rate, as there was nothing to eat in the house, and nothing to wear, which is more serious, she went to work.

But work, after twenty years, palls on the taste.

So we see Mrs. Drummond, puttering about the small, furnished room this cold, late-autumnal night, getting together her cup of tea, a bit of dry toast and something more substantial out of a tin can. It might have been salmon. I feel now that it was. There is nothing that sets off a table with melancholy, for me, like a bit of canned salmon. Let us see that the lady gets it on this occasion.

As she seated herself at the table, pushing aside the old newspapers, books and a bit of sewing, so as to get room to spread her towel for the feast, came a knock at the door. She started, looked around wildly as women do when visitors are about to enter and remarked:

"Come in."

You have guessed it already. I knew you would. Instinct again. And you were right. There came the knock at the door, the lady remarked wildly, "Come in," and in pranced that old pup John Drummond, with a sort of sheepish grin on his face.

The lady was about to collapse, but thought better of it. John glanced at the table.

"Heck, Myrtle, is this all you've got to welcome home the wanderer? Get your bonnet on and we'll slip over to the hotel, get a feed and talk it all over."

Between doubt, distruse, hope, fear and a variety of other feminine emotions, Mrs. Drummond slipped on her hat and cloak (the latter rather shabby, of course) and over the finest dinner she had eaten for twenty years, John explained to her that he had come back, that he had a good, substantial wad of the real green concealed in various banks and safety deposit boxes and much other pelf done up in tax free securities and hidden away somewhere and, incidentally, he added that he loved her in spite of all. All he wanted now was a chance to look a little out for wife and make her life not only free from toil, but one joyous, continual moving picture show.

Just what Mrs. Drummond said, I do not know, but the story in the newspaper ended in this suggestive fashion:

Let us continue to hope for a few days longer.

No Man Can Travel Back Over the Road to Yesterday

Old Daddy Time forbids any man to go back over the trail of life. Silently he orders us to go forward. What we did or did not do on any of those yesterdays must stand. Everything is chalked up in a closed record book—thus the necessity of doing the best and the right thing each day as each day comes. Men not only create the world in which their families must live. Yesterday's deeds have a direct influence on all the tomorrows. A man's future, as well as the future of those depending on him, is governed by what he does today.

Beauty Doctors for the Dog.

Sportsman's Digest: The practice of improving the beauty of the face as well as the form has been in vogue for quite some time among those of the human race who cater to this art. Now we hear that the French have gone still further, by opening an establishment and calling it the "Institute of Beauty for Dogs." The daily papers carrying the advertisements for this beauty shop, give in detail the different operations that are performed on the dog, and also the price that is only too gladly paid by those owners who possess these socalled fashionable pets. To change the form of the dog's muzzle the fee is $20; to improve the tail, $4; to alter a drooping ear to one close set to the head, the price is set at $8. For smaller operations the charges, of course, are lower. As fads change every so often this institute should be in great demand by those who are willing to pay the price, still, one wonders what pleasure the dogs themselves get out of being forced to submit to the operations that are performed on them by these beauty specialists.

Boston Transcript: It's strange that people who change their minds so often don't occasionally get a good one

MEN AND THINGS

It may be that we are getting old and blase, but we cannot warm up to interest in such controversies as who shall be chairman of the interstate commerce committee of the senate. It looks too much like the familiar sham battle in which the real controversy is over whose personal ambition shall be served. The chairman is one member of one committee of the senate. If there are a sufficient number of senators who honestly desire to pass any bill there is enough of them to take a bill out of the hands of any committee that is purposely delaying report on it, and if there are not enough with that honest desire they will find some other way of beating it than that of burying it in committee.

It is contended that the election of a progressive as chairman of the interstate commerce committee of the senate would be a moral victory for that element. There are people in this world who think that a moral victory is a great achievement, but insofar as we have been able to ascertain a moral victory is one in which a person does not accomplish anything except to make himself feel good. The hard-boiled gentlemen who run our politics are perfectly willing to let anybody have a moral victory if they can walk off with the goods themselves.

Personally we agree with Bishop Shayler that common honesty demands that those ministers who deny the teachings of their church ought to resign instead of going about trailing their coats in front of the bishops and other dignitaries of the organization daring them to try them for heresy. A minister is entitled to hold whatever opinions he pleases, just as is every other man, with respect to anything that the church teaches, but when these amount to a denial of the truth of fundamental doctrines he ought to step out. A soldier of the cross guilty of mutiny is a sad spectacle.

Several have written in to ask why we occasionally slam the poet and poetry, and the intimation is very broadly given that there is no music in our soul if it fails to be impressed by the grandeur of syllabled and rhymed verse. Here again we are misunderstood. Our protest is directed against the foolishness of imagining that nothing worth while can be embalmed in anything but the poetic form; it is directed against the waste of time on the part of so many who woo the muse in hunting for rhymes and sounding phrases swung in deathless meter when all they can ever say could just as well be expressed in prose; and is directed against the notion that poetry must be good because it is difficult to figure out what the author meant.

To a mind keenly alive to the value and beauty of words prose has a charm almost equal to that of poetry. We were struck by this fact most forcibly the other day when we were reading what might properly be construed as a defense of the use of the poetic form. The writer had quoted these lines: "By the tideless, dolorous, inland sea, in a land of sand and ruin and gold," to illustrate the impact upon the brain of living words. He added: "When we read these lines there is a sun behind us over the sea, an hour from the horizon, and barbaric pillars before us, carved and fretted by blown sands. x x x Words humble tho they may be when spoken over the dinner table or read from a newspaper, here they are slow, fargesturing, rich with a terrible romance." Which is best, the prose or the poetry in the quotations?

Here comes the dean of women of the state university to certify that the co-eds at Nebraska are dressing less extravagantly and better than most other institutions that she is acquainted with; that they frown upon the girl who comes to school loaded down with jewels and wearing expensive dresses and high heeled shoes; and that the result is to restrict dressing within reasonable bounds so that some sort of a standard garb has actually altho not intentionally been evolved. It is refreshing to be informed that some part of the world remains sensible.

Another thing I' hold onto that'll be worth fer more than a good complexion, is that school girl disposition. Why don't a doctor sit near th' entrance at th' the-ater where he kin git out easy?

Take a fruit, subtract an organ, add an agricultural exhibit, add part of an egg, subtract a goblin and resulting letters will spell the surname of the eleventh president of the United States.

To Retrim a Felt Cloche.

Detroit News: If you have tired of your felt cloche retrim it in this smart way: Slit it at one side near the back. Place the trimming just above the slit. Cut five petal-shaped pieces of velvet. Applique them to the crown of the hat. Also applique a band of the velvet around the crown. Using colored silk make a buttonhole stitch around the band, the petals and the stem of the flower. Face the under brim with the velvet. If the hat is black use a colored velvet and vice versa. For a young girl a slit hat like this is made very attractive if long, narrow streamers are brought from the stem of the flower thru the slit and allowed to hang down over the shoulder.
